Dedicatoria

Este libro, dedicado a la vida y la obra guitarrística de Madame Sidney Pratten, nacida Catharina Josepha Pelzer (1824-1895), es mi humilde y sincero homenaje a una mujer luchadora, amante de la guitarra, extraordinaria concertista, maestra y formadora, que ayudó a muchas personas a aprender a tocar la guitarra y compuso obras intimistas y románticas, muy bonitas y agradables de tocar, allá por el siglo XIX, en la Inglaterra de la Reina Victoria y que representa perfectamente a esa “rara avis” que es la mujer en el maravilloso mundo de la guitarra. Desde el mismo momento que supe de su existencia me cautivó profundamente esta mujer y su obra. No podía dejar de rendirle este tributo.

Pero, sobre todo, este libro está dedicado, con mi ilimitado amor, a mis hijos: Laura, Inés y Artyom.

Prólogo

La presencia de la mujer en el ámbito de las distintas disciplinas artísticas ha estado silenciada, a lo largo de la historia, por evidentes cuestiones sociales que no han favorecido su mayor o mejor difusión.

El largo proceso artístico o la necesaria reflexión estética no han sido siempre cómodos asientos diarios a disposición de las mujeres con los que hayan podido materializar su espíritu creativo o interpretativo; más bien, al contrario. En la mayoría de las ocasiones han tenido que redoblar su esfuerzo personal en favor de poder expresarse artísticamente o, directamente, han tenido que apartar de su vida diaria esa dedicación.

El mundo de la música no ha sido ajeno a esta realidad histórica. Sin embargo, en los últimos años, se ha venido llevando a cabo una importante labor de investigación, recuperación y revisión del trabajo creativo de muchas autoras que merecen ocupar un lugar en la historia del arte sonoro.

La guitarra, por su parte, ha ido sumando a los grandes nombres del repertorio universal, compositoras que, por su obra o su quehacer interpretativo, han sabido dejar una marcada huella en su historia.

Sin duda, una de las principales protagonistas de este “listado aún por descubrir o conocer” es Catharina Josepha Pelzer, más conocida en la historia de la guitarra como Madame Sidney Pratten.

Quizás, gracias a nacer en una familia donde la música era un pilar fundamental, pudo desarrollar amplia y libremente sus altas dotes artísticas. Fue una niña prodigio, hija de un afamado guitarrista alemán de la época, Ferdinand Pelzer, del que recibió sus primeras lecciones de guitarra; tuvo varias hermanas que también se dedicaron al mundo de la música; Giulia, Jane y Anne W. y, además, fue la esposa de Robert James Sidney Pratten, excelente flautista del que tomó sus apellidos para nombrarse artísticamente y con el que realizó conciertos de cámara.

Con el presente libro, Artemio Milla Gutiérrez nos adentra y profundiza en la historia de esta afamada concertista, compositora y prestigiosa pedagoga de la guitarra, que vivió una vida profesional enmarcada principalmente en la sociedad de la Inglaterra victoriana.

Esta tercera edición viene a ampliar una ya interesante y necesaria versión anterior, aportando más datos y documentación original, prácticamente desconocida hasta ahora.

Podremos acercarnos a la protagonista y conocer su evolución vital y profesional, además de tener acceso a una amplia información bibliográfica y a un escogido y selecto número de imágenes de su catálogo de obras y valiosa colección de guitarras. Todo ello supone una riquísima aportación al redescubrimiento y a la revaloración de personajes tan importantes de la historia de la guitarra.

El autor, Artemio Milla Gutiérrez, Doctor en Economía, filántropo de la guitarra y gran aficionado y estudioso de ella, hace justicia ante el "silencio histórico" que presidía su legado artístico. Hay que felicitarle y agradecerle su vocación de musicólogo, gracias a la cual tenemos ante nosotros un valiosísimo trabajo, hecho con gran amor y pasión, que, sin duda, ayudará en gran medida a conocer el valor y el alcance artístico de Madame Sidney Pratten.

Personalmente, quiero agradecerle el haberme acercado a la figura de Madame Sidney Pratten, al igual que a la de otras guitarristas-compositoras que siguen aún en el limbo artístico.

Introducción

Recuerdo perfectamente mi primer contacto con Madame Sidney Pratten. Estaba viendo videos de guitarra en Youtube hace algunos años, en 2011 y, casualmente, escuché a Alex Timmerman¹ tocar de forma maravillosa y con una gran sensibilidad una bonita y romántica obra compuesta por Madame Sidney Pratten, llamada 'Sadness', dedicada a su alumno y amigo John Lindsay Leckie (el hermano del Dr. Walter James Leckie, famoso discípulo y amigo de Francisco Tárrega) en una preciosa guitarra construida en Inglaterra en 1846 por J. Guiot.

'Sadness' me cautivó tanto que, además de buscar la partitura y aprender a tocarla (es una obra sencilla, íntima y seguramente dedicada en su concepción a su marido, Robert James Sidney Pratten, fallecido en 1868) me hizo interesarme por su autora, Madame Sidney Pratten, de la que yo no había oído hablar anteriormente.

Desde ese momento, todo lo relacionado con la vida y obra guitarrística de esta mujer, penetró en lo más hondo de mi alma y mi corazón, como nunca ha sucedido con nadie anteriormente.

No puedo explicar desde una perspectiva lógica y racional el vínculo emocional que me une con Madame Sidney Pratten, pero así es. Tal vez sea porque, como siempre he dicho a mis amigos, yo me equivoqué al nacer en España y en el siglo XX, pues me sentía muy identificado con la Inglaterra de la segunda mitad del siglo XIX. Los motivos: el honor, el sentido de la caballería, la palabra, la educación, el respeto, etc. de la alta sociedad de aquella época, que son valores que yo comparto íntegramente.

Tengo un retrato y una fotografía original suya en mi despacho en casa, he comprado dos guitarras que pertenecieron a Madame Sidney Pratten, he ido a visitar su tumba tres veces en el Cementerio de Brompton en Londres (e iré a visitarla cada vez que vaya a esta ciudad, pues se lo he prometido). En mi primera visita dejé un ejemplar de la primera edición de este libro en su tumba, bien protegido en una carpeta de plástico transparente que, lamentablemente, ha sido sustraído, he tocado sus obras y, por último, he escrito este libro financiado íntegramente por mí y de gratuita distribución (física y digital) en su honor, con toda mi admiración y respeto.

Biografía

Madame Sidney Pratten (1824-1895), nacida como Catharina Josepha Pelzer, vino al mundo el 15 de noviembre de 1824 en Mülheim-am-Rhein (Alemania)² y murió en Londres (Inglaterra), el 10 de octubre de 1895, dejando un enorme legado en forma de publicaciones didácticas, obras y el amor de todos sus alumnos.

Tuvo varios hermanos, a saber³:

- Sarah Pelzer (1825-?)⁴
- Jane Pelzer (1832-1849), quien aprendió a tocar la guitarra y el piano y fue la alumna favorita de Ignaz Moscheles (1794-1870), famoso compositor y pianista. Murió, siendo joven, con 17 años, poco antes de que su familia abandonara Exeter para regresar en forma definitiva a Londres.
- Anne Wilhelmina Pelzer (1833-1897)⁵, quien tocaba la concertina, la guitarra y el piano, además de componer y enseñar. Contrajo matrimonio en 1859 con el Dr. Julius Althans (1833-1900) y poco a poco fue retirándose de la enseñanza para dedicarse a su vida privada. No se conoce que tuvieran hijos.
- Ferdinand Pelzer (1837-1864).
- Julia (Giulia) Gertrude Pelzer (1839-1938), la más famosa de entre todos ellos, guitarrista, mandolinista, pianista y profesora de música, quien la acompañó durante toda su vida y continuó su obra docente tras su muerte.
- Cunigunda Antonia Marie Kratz Pelzer (1841-1878), quien más adelante contraería matrimonio con George Arthur Rooks (1835-1891) en 1876, abogado de profesión, con quien tuvo una hija Cunigunda Agnes M.B. Rooks (1878-1881).
- Christian Pelzer (1842-1845)⁶, quien murió por ingestión de hielo.

Todos ellos fueron hijos de Ferdinand Pelzer (1801-1864), renombrado guitarrista alemán, compositor, editor y maestro, quien, acompañado por su esposa Maria Legrand (1804-1863) y sus hijas Sarah Pelzer y Catharina Josepha Pelzer, emigró a Londres (Inglaterra) en el año 1829. Ya en Inglaterra, Ferdinand Pelzer apuntó a su hija Catharina Josepha a dar clases de teoría musical y composición con el organista y compositor William Carnaby (1772-1839).

Ferdinand Pelzer [Joannes Wilhelmus Ferdinandus Peltzer] nació en Kofferen (Alemania) el 31 de agosto de 1801, donde comenzó sus estudios de música, iniciándose como cantante y pianista, si bien pronto se decantó por la guitarra y el canto y comenzó a ganarse la vida como cantante, profesor y concertista de guitarra. Sus padres fueron Heinrich Anton (Jacob) Peltzer (1775-1839) y Cunigunda Gertrude Kratz (?-1853), quienes contrajeron matrimonio el 12 de marzo de 1801.

Arreglo de la obra 'Robin Red-Breast' por Anne Wilhelmina Pelzer

El 23 de abril de 1823 contrajo matrimonio con Maria Legrand, hija de Peter (Petri) Nikolaus Legrand (1779-¿) y Annae Mariae Keuker [Brand] (1779-¿), decidiendo pasar su luna de miel en Londres. En el viaje conocieron al capitán inglés George Phillips, quien les convenció para hospedarse en su casa, en Grosvenor Place (Londres) y los introdujo en la sociedad inglesa de la época.

En 1824 Ferdinand Pelzer y Maria Legrand fueron a visitar a los padres de ella a Mülheim-am-Rhein y allí, el 15 de noviembre de 1824, nació Catharina Josepha, su primera hija.

Como hemos comentado anteriormente, en 1829 Ferdinand Pelzer y su esposa, decidieron regresar, junto con sus hijas, Sarah y Catharina Josepha, a Londres. En pocos meses Ferdinand Pelzer obtuvo el favor del público como guitarrista y decidió quedarse a vivir allí de forma definitiva junto con su familia (excepto por una larga estancia intermedia en Exeter de 1842 a 1849), donde poco a poco se convirtió en una figura muy importante en Inglaterra.

En 1833 editó, junto a los compositores y guitarristas Felix Horetzky (1796-1870) y Leonhard Schulz una revista llamada 'The Giulianiad' (de enero de 1833 a julio de 1835), en honor del compositor y guitarrista italiano Mauro Giuliani (1781-1829), donde se publicaban obras para guitarra de diversos autores (fue la primera revista de este tipo que se publicó en Inglaterra) y ese mismo año publicó su primer trabajo pedagógico: 'Instructions for the Spanish Guitar' que fue seguido de otro llamado 'Instructions for the Guitar Tuned in E Major' (seguramente escrito en Exeter entre 1842 y 1849)¹².

¹¹ Aunque en el Acta de Matrimonio figura el apellido Peltzer, Ferdinand mismo firma Pelzer (y así lo hizo toda su vida).

Maria Legrand falleció en Londres en 1863 y fue enterrada el 5 de septiembre en Saint Mary's Catholic Cemetery, Kensal. Ferdinand Pelzer murió en Londres en 1864 y fue enterrado, junto con su esposa Maria Legrand, el 15 de julio. Ambos comparten el mismo número de tumba (#6867)¹⁴.

El día 9 de junio de 2024, acompañado de mi hija Laura, visité Saint Mary's Catholic Cemetery (un cementerio precioso) que está situado junto al Cementerio de Kensal Green, para todo tipo de religiones, como reza el cartel [All Souls] y tomé las siguientes fotografías:

Julia (Giulia) Gertrude Pelzer (en adelante Giulia Pelzer) nació el 11 de diciembre de 1839 en Marylebone (Londres), en el número 39 de Great Portland Street y dedicó prácticamente toda su vida a la enseñanza de la guitarra (excepto por un período de 15 años en los que se dedicó a cuidar de sus hijos, desde 1867 hasta 1882) y continuó con la escuela de su hermana Catharina Josepha a la muerte de esta en 1895.

Su primer concierto está acreditado en 1851, con 12 años, en el número 45 de Dover Street, en Piccadilly (Londres), junto a su hermana Anne W. Pelzer, quien tocó el piano y la concertina y otros músicos (un violinista y un chelista). Giulia Pelzer interpretó obras de Giulio Regondi y algunos dúos junto con su hermana Anne Wilhelmina.

En 1853 pasó una larga temporada en el convento benedictino de Hammersmith donde su padre, Ferdinand Pelzer, enseñaba canto, armonía, guitarra y piano. Posteriormente pasó algún tiempo en el convento de Notre Dame, donde enseñó guitarra y la lengua inglesa, para regresar a Londres, en 1864, tras la muerte de su padre, donde empezó a dar clases de guitarra.

De las investigaciones realizadas para tratar de encontrar descendientes vivos de Giulia Pelzer (dado que Catharina Josepha Pelzer no tuvo hijos) he podido encontrar la siguiente información:

- No consta que haya tenido descendencia ni Henry J. King-Church, ni John Eyre King-Church, ni Ernest E. King-Church.
- Lydia Josephine King-Church se casó con Herbert Stanley Keigwin (1878-1962) y tuvieron cinco hijos: Rhoda Marion Keigwin (1904-1985), Joan Keigwin (1905-2000), Philip Henry Keigwin (1906-1931), Barbara Keigwin (1906-1958) y John Jenkyn Keigwin (1909-1997). No consta que haya descendientes de Philip Henry Keigwin ni de Barbara Keigwin.
- Richard Thomas Basset King-Church se casó en 1928 con Catherine G. Pender (1893-1940). No consta que tuvieran hijos.
- Rhoda Marion Keigwin se casó en 1933 con Alan Edward Oliver (1908-1981) y tuvieron dos hijos: Philip Alan Oliver (1942-1993) y Giles Francis Oliver (1948-2020). No consta que haya descendientes de Philip Alan Oliver ni de Giles Francis Oliver.
- Joan Keigwin se casó con Kenneth Wilson Howard Read (1905-1978) y tuvieron tres hijos: Anne Josephine "Josie" Read (1938-1979), Joan Francis Camilla "Kitty" Read (ca. 1943) y Andrew Kenneth Howard Read (1940-2023). Joan Francis Camilla "Kitty" Read se casó con Brian Tulloch (¿) y posteriormente con Charles Donald Liner (¿). Ni Anne Josephine "Josie" Read (nunca se casó) ni Joan Francis Camilla "Kitty" Read han tenido hijos.

Andrew Kenneth Howard Read se casó en 1966 con Christina Anne Merrick (1943) [de quien se separó en 1981] y tuvieron dos hijos: Benjamin Michael Howard Read¹⁷ (1970) y Daniel Philip Keigwin Read (1972). Con posterioridad se casó con Caroline Grace (1954) con quien tuvo dos hijas: Katie Read (1985) [quien tiene tres hijos] y Eleanor Read (1990) [no tiene hijos].

Benjamin Michael Howard Read está casado con Nuala Theresa Horner (1971) y tienen dos hijos: Edward Donal Howard Read (2008) y Jonathan Kenneth Frederick Read (2010). Daniel Philip Keigwin Read está casado con Virginia Boehm (ca. 1976) y tienen dos hijos: Matthew Howard George Read (2007) y Robert Andrew Emil Read (2009).

- John Jenkyn Keigwin se casó en 1946 con Sylvia Margaret Turner (1908-1988). Tuvieron dos hijos.

Siendo madre y maestra, tomó clases de mandolina del gran concertista y compositor italiano Ferdinando de Christofaro (1846-1890), considerado el mejor mandolinista de Europa en la época quien, además, tocaba el piano. En 1887 consiguió una plaza como maestra en la prestigiosa Guildhall School of Music en Londres, además de seguir dando clases particulares de guitarra y mandolina a sus alumnos.

Giulia Pelzer murió el 17 de septiembre de 1938 en Holborn (Londres) y fue enterrada el 29 de septiembre en Highgate East Cemetery, en Highgate, London Borough de Camden, junto a su marido, sus cuatro hijos infantiles y su hijo Henry James (quien posteriormente fue trasladado a Austria, tal y como reza su tumba).

MADAME GIULIA PELZER'S GUITAR AND MANDOLINE RECITAL, JUNE 11th, 1901.

From "THE TROUBADOUR," July 20th, 1901.

IT was a fashionable audience which assembled on Tuesday evening, June 11th, at the Steinway Hall, to appreciate a most successful Concert given by Madame Giulia Pelzer, assisted by her pupils. The Hall was well filled, and although the day had been excessively tropical, a cool atmosphere was maintained throughout the evening by means of ice artistically arranged among the palms and flowers which embellished the platform. Madame Pelzer is sister and successor to the late Madame Sidney Pratten, and the major portion of the items on the programme were compositions by that late distinguished guitarist. The proceedings opened with E. German's "Shepherd's Dance," executed by a mandoline trio consisting of Miss Brandon, Miss Beard, and Miss Swinyard. During the evening these talented ladies again appeared, Miss Brandon rendering a mandoline solo, Etudes No. 13 and 14 (De Beriot), and a duet with Miss Beard, while Miss Nellie Swinyard came forward with a mandoline solo, "Salut d'Amour" (Elgar). The Misses Griffith supplied two vocal duets, "Come with thy Lute" (Pratten) and "Comme un posse vivre" (Pratten), to their own guitar and mandoline accompaniment. Col. Temple gave two guitar solos, 1. "Andante Pastorale" (F. Sor), 2—"Farewell to the Old Year" (Pratten), for which he received well-merited applause, while Mr. Henry D. Truscott was accorded an encore for his guitar songs, "An Old Ballad" (by desire) and "Polish Volkslied" ("Tell me now"). An excellent Spanish vocalization was given by Miss Pitt, Miss Yarrow, and Miss Lily Eckstein, who has a credit balance of intelligence in her favour, although barely 12 years of age. In addition, Miss Eckstein played a charming mandoline solo, which earned for her a distinguished service reward. Mrs. E. J. W. Gibb possesses a voice of unique range, and the delightful manner in which she interpreted, in the national tongue, Bizet's

"Habanera" (Carmen) gave satisfaction to a high degree. Mrs. Gibb furnished her own guitar accompaniment. A guitar duet was also contributed by Miss Atkinson and Miss Hetty Hamilton. The bonne bouche was of course the playing of Madame Pelzer, and at the conclusion of several guitar duets, of which "Andante Expressivo," No. 1, was certainly la première, there was a tremendous outburst of applause. A keen sense of pleasure was felt when two magnificent bouquets were presented to Madame, who at first did not notice the gift, thereby causing a little mirth.

F. H. B.

Extract from "THE LADY," June 20th, 1901.

Madame Giulia Pelzer, sister of the late Madame Sidney Pratten, and her pupils were responsible for a most enjoyable guitar and mandoline recital at the Steinway Hall on the 11th inst. Both the solo and ensemble playing were very finished and pleasing, the mandoline solos by Miss Brandon—who gave two of De Beriot's etudes—Miss Lily Eckstein, and Miss Nellie Swinyard being especially noticeable. Colonel Temple played as guitar solos Madame Pratten's "Farewell to the Old Year" and Sor's "Andante Pastorale," and Madame Pelzer won much applause for her performance of her sister's composition, "Twilight." Mr. Henry D. Truscott's traditional guitar songs were welcome contributions, and a Spanish song by the Misses Pitt, Yarrow, and Eckstein was another effective work from Madame Pratten's pen. Some guitar duets by Miss Atkinson and Miss Hetty Hamilton included Garibaldi, Indian, and military marches, and amongst the performers were the Misses Beard, Griffith, Pitt, and Mrs. E. J. W. Gibb, who sang the "Habanera" from "Carmen," and Messrs. Arthur Dipstale and F. Black.

Catharina Josepha Pelzer (más adelante Madame Sidney Pratten) nació el 15 de noviembre de 1824 y fue una niña prodigio de la guitarra. Su primer concierto profesional, junto a su padre, tuvo lugar en 1833, en el Kings Theatre (Londres).

Litografía de Catharina Josepha Pelzer por Charles Baugniet (1853)

Entre 1834 y 1836 actuó formando dúo junto al guitarrista italiano Giulio Regondi (1822-1872), otro niño prodigio de la guitarra, con quien mantuvo una sincera amistad durante toda la vida de este. Sus conciertos y recitales inspiraron a muchas personas a aprender a tocar la guitarra, entre ellas, las princesas Louise [Duchess of Argyll (1848-1939)] y Beatriz [Princess of the United Kingdom (1857-1944)], hijas de la Reina Victoria de Inglaterra, de las que fue maestra.

Giulio Regondi

The musical public was, indeed, privileged at this time. The infant prodigies—Catherina Josepha Pelzer and Giulio Regondi—had met, and were brought out together. Such diminutive performers were “lost” on a large platform; so, to be seen as well as heard, they were mounted upon a table. Madame Pratten often used to speak of these days when she played duets with Regondi, whose abilities she always highly praised.

It may be interesting to add that Fraulein Pelzer played on a “Terz” guitar—a small-sized instrument.

'Reminiscences of Madame Sidney Pratten', p. 20

En 1841 la Familia Pelzer residía en Albany Street, St. Pancras, Middlesex, en Londres (excepto Catharina) y en 1842 se fueron a vivir a Exeter, donde vivieron en el número 6 de Longbrook Street, para regresar de nuevo a Londres, ya en forma definitiva, en 1849, año del fallecimiento de Jane Pelzer. Es en Exeter donde comienza Catharina Josepha Pelzer a dar clases de guitarra para, posteriormente, introducirse en la sociedad londinense como concertista, gracias al apoyo de Lady John Somerset, quien le dejó una sala para las clases y para conciertos íntimos de salón, muy populares en la época.

MISS Pelzer—at seventeen years of age—established herself as a teacher of the guitar in Exeter. She received in that city liberal support from a fashionable clientèle. Perhaps the most fortunate event of her professional life occurred here. Lady John Somerset took a great fancy to the young guitariste, and persuaded her to go to London. Her ladyship gave Miss Pelzer apartments in her own residence, and introduced her to the nobility as an instructress, which soon brought her into fame.

'Reminiscences of Madame Sidney Pratten', p. 26-27

Catharina Josepha Pelzer tomó artísticamente el segundo nombre y apellido de su marido, Robert James Sidney Pratten (1824-1868) tras el fallecimiento de este, ya que sentía un gran amor y admiración por él, pasando a llamarse profesionalmente Madame Sidney Pratten.

Su primer domicilio conyugal fue en el número 131B de Oxford Street, en Londres, mudándose posteriormente a una mejor zona, en Cavendish Square. Se sabe que en 1861 el matrimonio residía en Welbeck Street, en Marylebone, Middlesex.

Robert James Sidney Pratten nació el 23 de enero de 1824 y fue un afamado flautista autodidacta, especialmente reconocido por haber incorporado notables avances en la técnica y construcción de la flauta para mejorar su sonido y sus prestaciones.

El 25 de marzo de 1835, a la edad de 11 años, hizo su debut como flautista en The Theatre Royal (Dublin), interpretando una obra llamada 'O dolce concerto', trasladándose posteriormente a Londres en 1845. El Duque de Cambridge se interesó por sus dotes musicales y lo envió a Leipzig (Alemania) en 1846 a estudiar composición, donde compuso su popular obra 'L'Espérance', en 1847.

Anuncio de un Concierto de Robert James Sidney Pratten
Berliner Musikzeitung, 7 de julio de 1847

En 1848 regresó a Londres, donde actuó como primer flautista en diversas orquestas, entre las que destacan The Royal Italian Opera House, The English Opera, The Sacred Harmonic, The Philharmonic y The Theatre Royal, en las que destacaba por su sonido poderoso y la brillante ejecución de las obras.

Sin embargo, dado su carácter prácticamente autodidacta, excepto por la época pasada en Leipzig y preocupado por su falta de formación, decidió tomar lecciones de teoría musical y contrapunto con el famoso compositor, director de orquesta y chelista Charles Lucas (1808-1869).

Como hemos comentado anteriormente, Robert James Sidney Pratten y Catharina Josepha Pelzer contrajeron matrimonio el 24 de septiembre de 1854. El matrimonio interpretó obras juntos en muchas ocasiones, para deleite de los amantes de la música. Formaron un matrimonio muy feliz, querido y admirado por todos sus amigos y alumnos y estuvieron muy unidos toda su vida, hasta el triste fallecimiento de Robert James Sidney Pratten en 1868.

Como anécdota, señalaremos que Catharina Josepha Pelzer sufría, en ocasiones, de miedo escénico (igual que su padre Ferdinand Pelzer) y que, para calmar sus nervios, su marido se sentaba en la primera fila del auditorio y, gentil y discretamente, le marcaba el ritmo de la obra que estaba tocando. También, para ayudarla con este problema, solían tocar juntos dúos para flauta y guitarra.

Durante su vida, Robert James Sidney Pratten escribió diversas publicaciones para la flauta, estudios especiales para la flauta diatónica de Siccamo y para su propio instrumento perfeccionado, así como diversos arreglos de aires de ópera.

El 22 de noviembre de 1867, durante una representación de 'Elijah', en Exeter Hall, comenzó a sentirse mal y, aunque casi sin apenas tenerse en pie, acabó de tocar el 'obbligato' de 'O Rest in the Lord', tan fantásticamente bien como siempre, pero no pudo continuar y se vio obligado a ser asistido y dejar la orquesta.

Robert James Sidney Pratten murió, poco tiempo después, el 10 de febrero de 1868, en el Ramsgate General Hospital de Kent y fue enterrado el 12 de febrero en Ramsgate St. George Church, Kent.

La muerte de su marido fue muy triste y dolorosa para Catharina Josepha Pelzer. Se recuerda una frase suya que figura en el libro 'Reminiscences of Madame Sidney Pratten', escrito en 1899 por Frank Mott Harrison (1866-1945) en la que señala que 'sus años de matrimonio fueron como estar en el cielo, pero en la tierra'.

Durante los siguientes tres años no actuó en público (aunque con alguna excepción) ni publicó ninguna obra.

En 1872 decidió, junto a su hermana Giulia Pelzer, establecer su propia escuela de guitarra en Southampton Street (Bloomsbury Square), en Londres.

Durante su vida publicó varias obras de carácter didáctico. En 1859 publicó 'Guitar School' (quizá su obra de enseñanza más completa) compuesta por 236 ejercicios y estudios, incluyendo ejercicios progresivos, diagramas, ejercicios para ambas manos, arreglos, estudios y obras de diversos compositores.

Portada de 'Guitar School'

Pero pronto se dio cuenta de que este libro era demasiado exigente para los principiantes. Así, altamente preocupada por posibilitar a todos los aficionados a la guitarra el poder disfrutarla y consciente de que muchas personas o bien no tenían la habilidad suficiente para tocarla o, simplemente, no disponían del tiempo necesario para su práctica, sacó a la luz diversas publicaciones, entre las que se encuentra un manual llamado 'Learning the Guitar Simplified', publicado en 1874, que tuvo bastante éxito en la época e incluye arreglos y obras menores para la práctica de la guitarra (sola y con voz), así como algunas obras de autores reconocidos.

En el manual se incluían ejercicios sencillos, cada uno de los cuales iba seguido de una obra fácil de tocar, junto con diagramas y las anotaciones correspondientes de digitación y la posición de los dedos en el mástil y los trastes, todo ello para facilitar el aprendizaje de los alumnos.

En 1881, y en dos volúmenes, publicó 'The Guitar Tutor', que contenía ejercicios y estudios técnicos, arreglos, ejemplos y obras de diversos autores, especialmente de Fernando Sor (1778 - 1839) y Mauro Giuliani, dos de sus compositores favoritos.

Madame Pratten found, when she commenced teaching the guitar, that the amateur pupil was not inclined to devote sufficient study to the instrument to gain the necessary technique to grapple with the difficulties of the music of the classic authors for the guitar. The works of Giuliani and Sor, Legnani, Nüske and Schulz were beyond the powers of the average student. She therefore commenced to produce some suitable pieces for her pupils. These pieces require no commendation from my pen, their own reputation is sufficient, for what guitar player has not discovered their worth?

También sugirió a sus alumnos, con el fin de evitar que las cuerdas de la guitarra pudieran romperse, que la nota Mi de la sexta cuerda se bajase un tono (Re), cambio este que también aplicaba cuando tocaba ella sola la guitarra, señalando que las notas producían una mejor vibración y un mejor tono.

En otra de sus publicaciones didácticas, llamada 'Colored Diagrams of the Notes of the Fingerboard of the Guitar', utilizó colores para identificar cada nota en la escala diatónica y permitir un aprendizaje más agradable de las notas y sus posiciones al alumno.

They draw the end under as above, and draw the string down tightly and

To tune the pegs UP the strings turn from you with left hand. to LOWER the strings turn pegs towards you. be sure also to turn all the pegs the same way for up, and the reverse way for down.

This diagram applies to the little E gut string, being thinner re- two twists under and a loop or double knot to prevent it jumping out at the bottom.

12 The cause of the third remark may be, that the strings are bad, or some defect at the bridge, nut, or machine, (which cuts the strings) or, the Guitar is tuned too high.

13 To avoid the inconvenience of the strings breaking, I suggest to my pupils to tune the strings of the Guitar a whole note lower. Tuning the E silver string to D of the Piano, and the other notes in rotation, by this means the strings are not so hard to press down, nor so liable to break.

14 Unless playing with other instruments, for my own playing, I generally tune my Guitar a whole note lower, as above suggested, by that means the strings vibrate better and a more sympathetic tone is produced. See page 4. Nº 15^a

También, y como curiosidad, diremos que fue una gran defensora de la afinación de la guitarra en Mi mayor (de hecho, compuso muchas obras en esta tonalidad), como lo demuestra su publicación en 1882 de 'Instructions for the Guitar Tuned in E Major', que incluye arreglos y obras menores para la práctica de la guitarra en esta tonalidad (seguramente sacó esta idea del método que, con el mismo título, había publicado su padre, Ferdinand Pelzer, años antes).

Además de la guitarra, que evidentemente fue su instrumento principal, también se dedicó (sobre todo a nivel de enseñanza) a la concertina inglesa, inventada por Sir Charles Wheatstone (1802-1875) en 1829 y la gigelira, un tipo de xilófono.

Madame Sidney Pratten fue maestra de Frank Mott Harrison (escritor y editor), quien a la muerte de su profesora le dedicó un maravilloso libro, antes citado, cuya lectura del todo recomiendo, llamado 'Reminiscences of Madame Sidney Pratten' (1899) y de Ernest Shand.

También fue maestra de muchísimos alumnos (más de 2.000 según cita Frank Mott Harrison) y de algunos personajes ilustres y conocidos, como las ya mencionadas hijas de la Reina Victoria, las Princesas Louise y Beatriz, dedicando a la primera de ellas su obra 'The Princess Louise, Op. 70', para piano y guitarra, Lady John Somerset [Lady Catherine Annesley (1793-1865)], Albert F. Cramer (1865-1931), las hermanas Ada Mary (1870-1922) y Edith Nina Tulloch (ca. 1873-?) y los doctores Walter James Leckie (1846-1925) [amigo íntimo y alumno posterior de Francisco Tárrega (1852-1909)]¹⁹ y John Lindsay Leckie (1844-1900). A este último le dedicó sus obras 'Sadness', Op. 91, 'A Lost Love', Op. 92 y 'A Lament', Op. 93, mientras que al Dr. Walter James Leckie le dedicó sus obras 'Hungarian March', Op. 58, 'Progressive Preludes and Pieces for Guitar' y 'Dance of the Witches', Op. 83.

Ada Mary (guitarra) y Edith Nina Tulloch (quien derivó su carrera hacia el canto como soprano) formaron parte del grupo denominado "The Misses Tulloch", un grupo escénico plural formado junto a sus hermanas Olive (1881 - 1974) [actriz infantil], Dora Lillian (1878 - 1945) [recitado y drama] y Minnie Beryl (1876 - 1957) [mandolina], tal como confirma el título del reportaje de "The Sketch" de 11 de octubre de 1893, "A Quintette of Talent", que a lo largo de la década de 1890 ofrecieron un espectáculo de salón itinerante que la propia prensa clasificaba como «recitales vocales, instrumentales y dramáticos».

El anuncio profesional que insertaron en The Musical Times de abril de 1897 detalla con precisión la naturaleza del repertorio; se reproduce textualmente:

HOW TO PLAY THE GUITAR.

By MADAME SIDNEY PRATTEN, Teacher to Her Royal Highness the Princess Louise.

THE EDITOR has asked me to write an article on How to Play the Guitar, but I fear it will be rather difficult to do so clearly, as the various effects that can be produced can really only be attained by personal instruction or by seeing and hearing the instrument played by an experienced performer.

The guitar is a charming and graceful instrument, capable of much execution, intense pathos, and a variety of effects, peculiarly its own, and is admirably adapted as an accompaniment to the voice.

An eminent composer in eulogising the merits of the guitar says, with much truth, that although it has not the power of some large instruments, it has its revenge in its delicate sweetness and sympathetic tones.

The guitar now in use is called the Spanish Guitar, with six strings, it having superseded the old English guitar, a very inferior kind, of different shape and construction.

There is a very interesting article by Mr. Hopkins on the guitar, and guitars ancient and modern, in the new edition of "Dictionary of Music and Musicians," edited by Geo. Grove, D.C.L. I will therefore not enlarge on the subject.

The Spanish guitar was introduced into England about sixty or seventy years ago, as an artistic instrument, by a Spaniard, Ferdinand Sor, who had written some of the most exquisite and suitable pieces.

It is recorded, in Hogarth's "History of the Philharmonic Society," that Ferdinand Sor played a solo on the guitar at one of their concerts, when they were held at the Argyll Rooms, Regent Street.

About the same time there was another celebrated player and composer, an Italian, Mauro Giuliani, who resided in Vienna, and no doubt he brought the guitar into use in Germany.

He was a very prolific writer, and his numerous compositions (some hundreds), mostly very difficult, were published in Paris, London, and Vienna. He also wrote three concertos, with orchestral accompaniments the third concerto was esteemed so good that it was arranged for the pianoforte by Hummel.

The most popular writers for the guitar abroad were the above named, and Carulli, Kreutzer, Kuffner, and Legnani; and in London, Sola, Nuske, and Neuland. The last-named wrote some lovely duetts for guitar and pianoforte, published by Chappell. The plates, I understand, are destroyed, but now that playing upon the guitar is becoming more general again, it is to be hoped that they may be reprinted.

Last, but not least, I must mention the modern genius of the guitar, Leonard Schulz; his original compositions are gems. He died in 1860. There were many fine players on the guitar who resided in London, but they have all passed away; the last remaining one was Giulio Regondi, who died a few years ago, after a lingering illness. He was also the first one who played the concertina, which he did to perfection. His compositions for the guitar and concertina are very difficult.

Guitars are made abroad; those made in Spain, the Spanish model, are larger and thicker than those made in France and Germany. The guitar shown in the illustration is of French make, as that particular shape is more adapted for a lady than the

and third fingers, raising the wrist sufficiently high to enable the three fingers to strike the three strings under the thumb. In striking a chord the thumb should fall on the first finger, resting between the first and second joints, with the knuckles slightly raised.

The great thing to avoid on the guitar is twanging and jarring.

Twanging is the result of pulling up the strings with the right hand fingers, which causes them to vibrate up and down, and to jingle against the frets, but if struck gently sideways that is avoided.

Jarring the strings is caused by the left hand not pressing the fingers sufficiently tight near the frets.

It is difficult to explain how the left hand should be held, because different chords very often require a different movement of the fingers, wrist, and position of the arm.

Sometimes the arm or elbow is held in, and the left hand grasping the neck of the guitar, perhaps the next chord may require the elbow to move out and to hollow the hand, the third movement may require the wrist to be held out, and so on.

A group of notes, which may appear almost impossible to take in one position of the hand, becomes quite simple by another movement, so that here the experienced teacher is required. The natural way to hold the hand is to grasp the neck of the guitar between the thumb and first finger, holding out the other fingers and the arm slightly away from the body. Hold the wrist back. Then place your first, second, and third fingers in rotation on the first, second, and third frets of the small gut string, having placed your fingers obliquely, then let your thumb be on the opposite side, facing the second finger.

By putting down the fingers obliquely the distances are more easily reached than by placing them straight.

The six open strings are tuned to the following notes of the pianoforte:—

larger ones. Of the six open strings three are silver and three gut.

The metal lines across the finger-boards (the front of the neck) are called frets; each produces an interval of a semi-tone by pressing the fingers of the left hand on any of the strings in rotation.

To hold the guitar properly is very essential to enable you to play with ease. It must be so held that both hands are free to move about without the instrument changing its position. It is more comfortable to sit on a low chair rather than on one too high.

Rest the guitar on the left knee, raising the foot sufficiently high on a footstool, or otherwise, so that the instrument rests between the chest and the knee, without stooping.

Place the right arm easily on the guitar; put down the little finger on the sounding board; strike the three silver strings with the thumb, the three gut strings with the first, second,

The student will observe that the strings of the guitar are tuned to the notes of the piano in the bass clef, but that the guitar notes are written in the treble clef an octave higher.

It will be seen that the guitar notes are written an octave higher than they sound, or, vice versa, the guitar sounds an octave lower than the notation. Although the guitar sounds Desde ese día mantuvieron una estrecha y duradera amistad hasta el fallecimiento, en 1895, de Madame Sidney Pratten, quien editó algunas obras suyas. De hecho, Ernest Shand se convirtió en uno de los principales patrocinadores del libro 'Reminiscences of Madame Sidney Pratten', escrito por Frank Mott Harrison en 1899, ya mencionado y su Funeral March, Op. 89, está dedicado a la muerte de Madame Sidney Pratten en 1895.

²⁰ La revista 'Music Hall and Theatre Review' inició su publicación el 6 de abril de 1889, siendo el último número publicado el correspondiente al 5 de septiembre de 1912.

Ernest Shand
(imagen propiedad de John Barrett Collection)

En ese mismo año Ernest Shand fue nombrado miembro del 'Board of Examiners de la Guild of Violinists' de Londres y a principios de 1896, de su Senado.

La obra para guitarra de Ernest Shand comprende un amplio rango de música, incluyendo obras de salón, variaciones, fantasías, canciones, música de cámara, obras para piano, transcripciones y obras pedagógicas. Su última obra: 'Introduction et Chanson', se publicó en 1911.

Para que podamos comprender el nivel guitarrístico de Ernest Shand, he aquí una reseña del 'Newcastle Evening Chronicle' del 3 de marzo de 1893 que sitúa a Ernest Shand a la altura del gran virtuoso Giulio Regondi: "Shand es un artista consumado en la guitarra. Desde los tiempos de Regondi, pocos han logrado maravillas con ese instrumento difícil pero delicioso como lo logrado por Shand."

A pesar de su éxito como compositor y guitarrista, Ernest Shand se dedicó principalmente a actuar como cómico en 'music halls' (desde 1886) y solo en los últimos años de su vida (en 1918 se trasladó a Birmingham), animado por su mujer y sus amigos, se dedicó a tocar la guitarra profesionalmente.

Hemos de recordar que, en la segunda mitad del siglo XIX, en Inglaterra, eran mayoritariamente las mujeres las que practicaban la guitarra, dedicándose los hombres, en su caso, a su enseñanza.

Frank Mott Harrison²² afincado en Hove, fue un escritor, periodista y editor además de propietario de una tienda de instrumentos musicales en Brighton (junto a su hermano Richard, mandolinista), amigo íntimo y alumno de Madame Sidney Pratten. Su esposa fue Alice Mary Pegg (1872-1959), cuyo padre fue secretario personal de Madame Sidney Pratten durante los últimos años de su vida. También fue doctor en Filosofía en la Facultad de Música por la Universidad de Londres (1935), con una tesis doctoral sobre "La música en la Inglaterra del siglo XVII y la influencia puritana".

Residió en el número 11 de Denmark Villas (hacia 1910) y, desde 1914 hasta finales de los años cuarenta, en el número 3 de Bigwood Avenue. Fue miembro del Ayuntamiento de Hove durante más de veinte años y, en febrero de 1942, fue nombrado concejal honorario (Alderman).

La importancia de Frank Mott Harrison en la vida de Madame Sidney Pratten es innegable, no en vano fue el autor, como ya hemos señalado, del libro 'Reminiscences of Madame Sidney Pratten' (1899) y, además, se encargó personalmente de todo lo necesario para gestionar el funeral y el entierro de Madame Sidney Pratten en el cementerio de Brompton, en Londres.

El libro tuvo su origen en una serie de artículos que Frank Mott Harrison publicó durante 1897 y 1898 en 'The Troubadour' (un periódico de la época) y que gozaron enseguida de la simpatía de los lectores.

Prácticamente nada se sabe de la vida de Frank Mott Harrison, excepto por lo ya comentado y por el enorme éxito que en su momento tuvo su libro 'John Bunyan. A Story of his Life' y por la importante donación que hizo el 29 de septiembre de 1938, al alcalde, concejales y burgueses del distrito de Bedford de su colección de más de 800 volúmenes de escritos de y sobre John Bunyan²³ y que actualmente está disponible al público en la Librería Pública de Bedford.

Portada del 'Catalogue of the John Bunyan Library'

²³ John Bunyan (1628-1688) fue un escritor y predicador inglés famoso por su novela 'El Progreso del Peregrino' (1678).

Frank Mott Harrison dedicó un poema a algunas de las obras de su profesora y amiga que presentamos a continuación²⁴:

. TO .

Mme. Sidney Pratten,

Whose charming compositions for the Guitar, tell, in their own peculiar language, many a tale—

Of "ELFIN'S REVELS," and of hob-goblin intrusions,
Of strange imaginations, of curious delusions.

The "DANCE OF THE WITCHES"—a "DANSE FANTAS-TIQUE,"

The "SPANISH DANCE"—a dance most realistic.

Pretty little "QUEEN MAB" and hideous "PUCK" we find
Are skilfully portrayed by thy poetic mind.

The sky we see with dark clouds overcast,
And stormy "RAIN" in torrents pouring fast ;

And then, as though by magic skill—to everyone's delight
The scene at thy command is adorn'd with "SUNSHINE," bright.

Thou tellest tales of "ALICE" and of sweet "VIOLET,"
Which are in strange contrast to the tale of the
"COQUETTE."

At times thou art "WEARY," and seem'st "FORGOTTEN,"—
And yet, surely, thou can'st not be so, often ?

To thy departed "TREUE LIEBE"—when lost in
"REVERIE"

We seem to hear thy notes exclaim—"I'm still
"DREAMING OF THEE."

By "A LAMENT" and "SADNESS," and filled with many fears

Through the "ABSENCE" of "A LOST LOVE"—thou wast
brought to "TEARS."

We hear at "EVENTIDE" thy sweet "EVENING SONG"
Wafted through the "TWILIGHT" and echoing along—
To the far-off realms of space, to the star-lit land so bright,
Where 'tis lost to human ear in the soft beams of
"MOONLIGHT."

From the land of the Guitar, and the home of the
"SERENADE,"

"A SPANISH ROMANCE" is briefly told of gallant knight
and maid.

Then solemn thoughts our minds inspire, when at the midnight hour we hear
Mournful strains from thy Guitar, as thou bid'st "FARE-WELL TO THE OLD YEAR."

When o'er the world of Fancy with thee our hearts may roam,

Thou bringest us back from "DREAMLAND" to "HOME
SWEET HOME."

²⁴ 'Reminiscences of Madame Sidney Pratten' (1899).

Del mismo modo, Madame Sidney Pratten, en sus cartas enviadas a Frank Mott Harrison, le comentaba la forma y manera en la que se había inspirado para componer algunas de sus obras, así como otros aspectos de su personalidad y enorme sensibilidad, cuyo contenido presentamos a continuación por su interés²⁵:

Appendix.

The following letters will convey to those readers who were not in correspondence with the late Madame Sidney Pratten an idea of her mode of expression and of her enthusiasm. In fact, her letters always showed her temperament at the time of writing. In some it is easy to trace the light happy heart—while others give vent to a dreamy sentiment which often possessed her when suffering from trouble or fatigue :—

I. HER COMPOSITIONS.

“I did nothing original in the way of composing until my 19th Divertissement—then came ‘Tears’ and ‘Lord Raglan’; then the ‘Serenade’; then ‘Absence’; and then I went on until my husband died. . . . After that my composing powers were blank for a long time. Then I suddenly began a different style — left off variations and begun ‘Sensucht’ and ‘Weary’ and so on, until my moods changed from sad to gay, with my little stories; and that was caused by the happy visits among friends and admirers of my guitar-playing. So my surroundings helped me to tumble into my various moods and styles.”

²⁵ ‘Reminiscences of Madame Sidney Pratten’ (1899).

2. SHELLEY'S POEM.

" How kind of you to send me the lovely poem of Shelley on the guitar. Yes, how it seems to speak to us—and we who love and dream of the guitar as I do. It seems to speak also to me of the very things I have composed in my various moods—to describe one's soul, its feelings of love, joy and sorrow; and the description of beautiful Nature. . . ."

3. WOMAN'S LIFE.

" I have never sought publicity as a matter of vanity for myself; I have upheld my dignity for the (sake) of the supposed slight on my loved guitar, which I felt was, should and might be, the future poetry of human souls; and as such I have endeavoured to inculcate into the minds of my aristocratic pupils their power to render a poem of woman's life and woman's mission—to soothe invalids and cheer up sad souls."

4. HER 'INSPIRATIONS.'

"I do think that 'Eventide' is one of my most lovely inspirations—I cannot say that I composed them, because I do not know when I shall do anything. I simply take up my guitar and out of the tips of my fingers tumble out the sounds on the strings . . . and then I play it over and over again until my brain retains it ; then sketch it down . . . Then I leave it, and return to it and put it 'ship-shape.' Then, with my 'little bricks' collected, I build up a romance or a story. My 'Twilight' was done as the sun was going down far below the hills, at Mr. Collard's lovely place (which was on a hill). It was so curious to see the large ball of fire gradually gliding down behind the hill and shedding around, in its disappearance, the golden glow of a glorious sunset—and then all gradually 'hushed up'—birds and people and animals."

5. HER HEALTH.

" I cannot get up my strength—the weather is so against me. I cannot get out for fresh air, so gain no strength. . . . I go on with my guitar teaching, and playing to my pupils—I feel to live again, and for the moment forget how ill and weak I feel. . . . My life is lonely—I have risen to a height in my guitar world, beyond all I could ever realise ; and, no doubt [in] the sadness of my lonely life I seek the companionship of the sweet tones of the guitar. And then, the thought and beating of my own heart produce the soothing music and come from the tips of my fingers."

AS FRIEND : HER CHARITY.

It is not my intention to proclaim to the world the good deeds of our late friend—they are too well known to those upon whom they were bestowed. The mention of a few acts of her charitable nature will enable those who did not know her intimately to form a more exact opinion of the character of Madame Sidney Pratten, who, although always ready to render service to those deserving help, keenly felt imposition when it was her misfortune to discover such.

“My charity is no virtue” she used to say, “I am only impulsive!” But impulse is, surely, the outlet of a sympathetic nature?

I am indebted to Mr. Pegg for the following anecdotes of Madame Sidney Pratten’s life :—

“On one occasion, whilst passing down one of the streets leading into Oxford Street, Madame Pratten saw a poor woman walking along, carrying a baby, and apparently almost without a piece of shoe to her feet. Madame Pratten stopped her, and after making some enquiries, she at once took off her own boots and gave them to the woman, and returned home in a cab, shoeless!”

“One day when riding in a hand-chair on the Brighton front, Madame Pratten heard the sound of a guitar. It was a young man and his wife playing one of her compositions. She was very much interested, and told them who she was. She played one of her pieces to them—greatly to the delight of the promenaders. This was probably the one and only occasion upon which Madame Pratten played in the open air publicly.”

“Finding one day that her hand-chair man was ill-clad (at Brighton) Madame Pratten gave him sufficient money to equip himself with a new overcoat, etc., remaining in the chair by herself while he adjourned to the nearest clothier’s shop.”

Mr. Pegg further adds: “It was no unusual thing for Madame Pratten to sit up writing until four or five o’clock in the morning. She would be up again at eight o’clock ready to receive the first post. For years she only allowed herself about five hours in bed.”

Como intérprete y pedagogo inició su carrera docente y obtuvo en 1897 un puesto en el Trinity College of Music de Londres. Fue, además, compositor de piezas de salón para guitarra - el crítico Richard Long, en la revista Soundboard (2002), le atribuye “un alma poética” y “armonías interesantes” -, con no pocas afinidades con Ernest Shand. Entre sus obras de guitarra y arreglos podemos citar: Le Ruisseau, Flores, Home Sweet Home y Song Without Words (obra original de Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy [1809-1847]).

Algunos comentarios de los conciertos de Madame Sidney Pratten en la prensa local, comentando su habilidad con la guitarra y su forma de tocar fueron los siguientes:

- 'Esta mañana ha tenido lugar un concierto en Hanover Square Rooms, el primero de los tres anunciados para la temporada, a la que asistieron numerosas personalidades. La Srta. Pelzer contribuyó en un alto grado a la gratificación de la audiencia y fue cordial y merecidamente aplaudida por sus esfuerzos'²⁸.
- 'Asombró a sus oyentes con su sorprendente interpretación de la guitarra. Esta jovencita produjo efectos en el instrumento del que no teníamos ninguna concepción previa. Fue capaz de tocar tres piezas brillantes acompañada de su padre, al compás de la admiración general que ambos provocaban. Su toque es poderoso y su ejecución es maravillosa. Nos sorprendió cómo sus dedos tan diminutos podían extraer sonidos tan perfectos de un instrumento que requiere de algo de fuerza para hacer la música más elocuente'²⁹.
- 'Madame Pratten, una de las guitarristas más consumadas del país, habiéndose torcido la mano izquierda unos días antes, en esta actuación, tocando una Serenata y La Marcha de Lord Raglan, ambas de composición propia, exhibió unas cualidades de ejecución y estilo admirables que la colocan en el rango más destacado de los legítimos guitarristas'³⁰.

También el libro de Frank Mott Harrison, 'Reminiscences of Madame Sidney Pratten' se hace eco del contenido de algunos conciertos, tal y como señalamos a continuación:

On Wednesday,
May 17th, 1871, under the patronage of
Her Serene Highness Princess Edward
of Saxe-Weimar, the Duchess of Wellington,
the Duchess of Roxburgh, the Marchioness of Westminster, and other members of the aristocracy, she gave a recital in which she played Giuliani's
Third Concerto (1st movement) to the pianoforte accompaniment of Madame Lucei-Sievers (a niece of M. Giuliani, the composer). In 1873, on Thursday,
June 19th, under the same patronage,
Madame Pratten announced a recital in which she was aided by great artistes, including some of the members of M. Gounod's Choir —accompanied by Mrs. Weldon.

Madame Pratten played the guitar part (with the orchestra) in Mr. Cowen's famous work "The Corsair" at its production in 1876 at the Birmingham Festival; but I am unable to say with what success. I should imagine that the instrument was out of place in such a performance. I have seen the guitar part from which she played—and Madame Pratten considered the tone of one guitar too feeble to be effective in such a work.

Reminiscences of Madame Sidney Pratten, p. 39

En general y durante toda la vida guitarrística de Madame Sidney Pratten (y también de Giulia Pelzer, su hermana), diversos periódicos locales ingleses publicaron, en la sección de ecos de sociedad, noticias relacionadas con sus conciertos, clases, publicaciones, estancias, etc., entre los que cabe destacar The Morning Post (Londres), The Birmingham Daily Mail (Birmingham), The Observer (Londres) y The Daily Telegraph (Londres); ya que, como hemos señalado, Madame Sidney Pratten fue una mujer muy reconocida en su época, tanto en su faceta de guitarrista y de profesora como en su faceta personal, además de ser una mujer muy querida entre sus alumnos, amigos y conocidos.

A continuación reseñamos algunos 'clippings' extraídos de periódicos de la época haciéndose eco de los conciertos de Madame Sidney Pratten.

"Musical Opinion,"
APRIL, 1893.

"Both professional and amateur guitarists will greet with pleasure the newly published compositions for the guitar from the pen of Madame Sidney Pratten, who has just issued a number of fresh solos. Especially delightful is the set of three pieces, 'Sadness,' 'A Love Love,' and a 'Lament.' There is also a stirring march, 'Ereilda.' Each one of these pieces is imbued with that charming fascination so characteristic of Madame Pratten's music. The remaining pieces—'A Norwegian March,' 'Wandering Thoughts,' 'See-Saw,' 'Forget-me-not,' and a 'Paisant Dance'—are all pleasing in their way, and while displaying the capabilities of the guitar, they fully demonstrate the composer's genius."

"The Musical Standard,"
NOVEMBER 11th, 1893.

OTHER CONCERTS.

"A few lines will serve with regard to the Misses Fullock's vocal, instrumental, and dramatic festival, given at the Sidney Hall, on Saturday afternoon last. The hall was amply filled by a sympathetic audience. Madame Sidney Pratten, who rarely appears in public, consented to play two of her 'admirer' guitar solos, viz., 'A Spanish Romance,' and 'Lord Raglan's March.' The former was from time to time verbally illustrated by the performer. The execution's dexterity in both pieces naturally commanded much interest, and gained an encore which was described as illustrative of a feature of Norwegian life, and the order of events was explained by Madame Pratten in an amusingly lucid manner."

"Winter's Weekly Magazine,"
NOVEMBER, 1893.

"I went to the afternoon entertainment given by the Misses Fullock at the Sidney Hall, on Saturday, the 4th. The hall was crowded with a friendly and rather chilly audience, which, however, gradually warmed up as the programme progressed. A very welcome item in the programme was a guitar solo by Madame Sidney Pratten. Madame Pratten only plays her own compositions—at least she only played them on this occasion—and she went to the trouble of apologizing for the explanation which she gave as one of the pieces progressed. It was a most needless thing to do, for the audience rose at the lady, and, if she had been willing, I think they would have kept her playing till now."

Madame Sidney Pratten gave her annual concert on Thursday at the Beethoven Rooms, introducing a selection of music for an instrument, the guitar, in the performance of which she may honestly be said to be unrivalled. But it was not only for the exhibition of her own powers the concert was undertaken but also for the advantage presented to introduce her pupils, one of whom, an amateur, Miss Maria Desanges, exhibited skill and refined taste in her performance of the two pleasing little songs which she sang to her own guitar accompaniment. Other musical pieces were pleasantly presented by Miss Purdy, Madlle. Mariani, Signor Bonetti, and Herr Werrenmath.

FEBRUARY, 1894.

TY is with great pleasure that we have the privilege of placing before our readers a portrait of Madame Sidney Frazer, the celebrated guitarist. Madame Sidney Frazer, nee Catherine Josepha Peizer was born of Mullion, on the beautiful Rhine—so popularly known to Englishmen on account of the many legends connected with places on its banks. Her father, a native of the same romantic place, the world first knew her as an infant prodigy, as we find little Franklin Peizer at a very tender age charming numerous audiences. Her first husband, a Frenchman, died in the prime of life, leaving her penniless and down. It is needless to say that our countrymen gave her an enthusiastic reception. She afterwards appeared with unparalleled success on the Continent, and on returning was the guest of Lord and Lady John Somerset. In the last year of her life, she well may be said to have been the Mrs. Robert Sidney Frazer, inasmuch as disgusted subject of our sketch, how difficult it is to avoid Cypid's dart. It was a case of mutual love, and they were married on Sept. 24th, 1854. After fourteen years of almost supreme happiness Madame Pratter received the greatest blow in her brilliant career—the loss of her husband. In their case it was truly as the poet says:—“Two hearts beat as one,” and the “angel of music” seemed to have left her. But her high sense of duty showed her that there are other things to do besides mourn the loved one lost, and we find her again writing these beautiful compositions of hers—of which space does not allow us to enumerate—and exclaiming as before, “about playing, she was a little out of tune.”—Miss M. M. Nicholson of Larned, Neb., writes:—“Princess Beatrice,” and much of the mobility have received instruction from her. It will surprise our readers when we tell them that this lady has instructed 1,658 pupils—what a pattern of industry! Like most German ladies she impresses one by her sincerity of manner, and true-heartedness. In private she is not only a good mother, but of her own free will a charming manner.

September 19, 1856,

Madame SHERY PRATT, who stands at the head of English grammatists, during her recent visit to Mr. and Mrs. Allen Mackenzie, at their seat, Brackley, near Ballinacorney, had the honour of performing before H. R. H. the Duchess of Albany, who is herself an accomplished musician, and warmly praised Madame PRATT's brilliant contrapuntal playing.

September 16, 1956

MADAME SIOGNY PRATTEN, the eminent guitarist, who is staying with Mr. and Mrs. Allan Mackenzie, at Brackley, near Ballater, has had the honour of playing to Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Albany, who expressed great pleasure at MADAME SIOGNY PRATTEN's brilliant performance.

January, 1887.

LEARNING THE GUTTAJ SIMPLIFIED, by MARGARET SOUNBY PRATTEN, 22 Dorset Street, Portman Square,

This lady has long been regarded as our highest authority on the guitar. She has taught no less than 1,190 pupils, among whom was Her Royal Highness the Princess Louise, and the edition before us (the title of this instruction book) embraces the results of Madame PRATHER'S matured thought and experience. It is the standard text book on the guitar, and those who wish to master this heavenly instrument must procure it.

January 29, 1857.

Next comes the question of an instruction book. MADONN R. SIDNEY PASTER'S "Learning the Guitar Straight!" is so identical to her, price 10c. 6d., is by far the best, and worth two dozen lessons from an indifferent teacher, who in most cases gives invaluable music, and a bad method of playing. This instruction book gives the fullest description of tuning and stringing the guitar, besides suitable exercises, scales and pieces.

And new a word about style. Do not attempt too much. A pretty simple song, accompanied with but a few changes of harmony, nicely played with full harp-like tone, is far preferable to some delicate and unsuitable piece arranged for the instrument; and songs intended for orchestral accompaniment are, as a rule, quite unsuitable for the harp, with the exception of some barcaroles and serenades.

June 18, 1887.

An entertainment was given at Downing House, Balgare Square (by kind permission of Mrs. Abbott), on Tuesday last, which was in every respect most successful. The guitar solo of Madame RUSSEY PRATER was highly appreciated, it being a unique, talented and pleasing performance.

December 27, 1889.

OF INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC the selections were extremely happy, one of the contributors being, Madame Stange-Peters, whose handling of the guitar was of the most unalloyed and successful kind. (The Recorder is no more, but is considerably mended.) In her next offering, "The Dance, in the first part, "Moonlight," followed by "Lord Raglan's March," and in the second she introduced a curious, novel, and most successful little instrument made of wood and straw, called the phyllon. On this she played delightfully, producing a clear and bright sound which excited at once the curiosity and admiration of the audience.

Entrada de un concierto celebrado junto con Giulio Regondi el 13 de marzo de 1834

Madame Sidney Pratten solía, en sus interpretaciones como solista, con una ingenuidad encantadora, contar la historia de sus propias composiciones, lo que, sin duda, era muy apreciado por el público que asistía a sus conciertos, a quien tenía cautivado. También solía tocar frecuentemente con sus alumnos en la Escuela Guildhall de Música y en Steinway Hall.

Durante muchos años Madame Sidney Pratten pasó cortas estancias de fin de semana en Brighton (Inglaterra) [actualmente Brighton & Hove] para descansar, hospedándose en Connaught House y en Cavendish Mansion.

Madame Sidney Pratten dio su último concierto en público en 1893. Tal fue su fama en vida y su popularidad que destacados constructores de guitarra como Louis Panormo (1784-1862) y Pierre René Lacôte (1785-1871) etiquetaron decenas de sus instrumentos con su nombre para promover las ventas.

Madame Sidney Pratten vivió los últimos años de su vida en el número 22 de Dorset Street, Portman Square (Londres).

El muelle estaba destinado principalmente a ser un embarcadero, pero también contaba con un pequeño número de atracciones. Fue destruido por una tormenta el 4 de diciembre de 1896. El Palace Pier (rebautizado como Brighton Pier en 2000) comenzó a construirse en 1891 y se inauguró en 1899.

Diversos periódicos locales se hicieron eco de la noticia de su fallecimiento, tal y como se puede apreciar en los siguientes obituarios:

MADAME SIDNEY PRATTEN, the eminent guitarist, died suddenly on the 10th inst. AN EMINENT GUITARISTE.

MME. SIDNEY PRATTEN, née Catherina Josepha Pelzer, was a native of Mulheim on the Rhine. Her father was an excellent guitar player and a clever musician. His one ambition was, however, to place his little daughter before the world as an infant prodigy, and in this endeavour he was so kindly assisted by Nature that, at a very tender age, little Fraulein Pelzer appeared as a "star" of an exceptional brilliancy—a brilliancy, we need hardly state, that has never been eclipsed. She was first presented in public before a London audience at the King's Theatre (now Her Majesty's). A most enthusiastic reception awaited her, and the press was unanimous in its praises of her extraordinary performances. The little artiste created a great furor. When but seven years of age, Miss Pelzer played at a concert in which Mme. Grisi and other eminent singers took part. About the year 1836 she achieved great successes at concerts given in the Hanover Square Rooms, and we quote the following criticism from The Mark Lane Express:—"The interesting little beneficiaire astonished her hearers by her wonderful performances on the guitar. . . . this young lady produced effects from the guitar of which we had no previous conception it was capable." On another occasion, a critique says: "She played three brilliant pieces, accompanied by her father, to the general admiration of the company assembled. Her touch is powerful, and her execution is wonderful; we were surprised how such tiny fingers could draw forth such perfect sounds from an instrument requiring some strength to make it 'discourse eloquent music.' In a very few years we doubt not to see this interesting child at the head of her profession."

Miss Pelzer afterwards appeared, with immense success, on the Continent, the newspapers of the time eulogising her abilities in the most extravagant terms. Among her numerous excerpts were the concertos for the guitar by Giuliani—works demanding a perfect technique and considerable powers of endurance to interpret. The Third Concerto alone consists of twenty-seven pages of closely printed music! The "little heroine"—as one critic so aptly styled her—had to compete with the greatest guitar players the world has ever heard; Giuliani, Sor, Schulz, Neuland, Horetzky, and the youthful Regondi were all before the public. The resources of the instrument were then exhibited as they had never been exhibited before, and, probably, as they never will be again. However, in spite of innumerable draw-

Miss Pelzer afterwards resided at Exeter, in which city she became the fashionable teacher. Lady John Somerset, the illustrious sister-in-law of the brave Lord Fitzroy Somerset, took a fancy to the young artiste and brought her to London, and most generously allowed her to reside at her mansion, and her ladyship introduced Miss Pelzer into the highest circles. Lady Somerset's protégée became the guitar instructress to many of the daughters of nobility, and she soon rose into eminence as a teacher. It was in honour of Lord Fitzroy Somerset being created Lord Raglan that Miss Pelzer composed one of her chef d'œuvres—the celebrated "Lord Raglan March."

So passed the younger days of this eminent artiste. A few years later Miss Pelzer became the object of the admiration of the distinguished musician, Robert Sidney Pratten, the great flautist and well-known composer. They became inseparably devoted to one another, and were married on September 24, 1854, and lived a most happy life—until death intervened. Mr. Pratten passed away in 1868. "My married life," said Madame Pratten, "was a heaven upon earth."

During these bright years of her life Madame Sidney Pratten assiduously devoted herself to the art she so dearly loved. She gave recitals, and produced a great many of the charming compositions for which she was so justly famed. Most of her exquisite "Songs without Words," "Impromptus," "Sketches," &c., derived their inspiration from episodes in her daily life, which, together with her poetic and romantic imagination, depict such fascinating little "tone pictures" that are worthy of the highest commendation. Her natural instinct in the choice of harmony, and her refined conception of melody, render her music genuine works of art—works for which she will be known for ages yet to come. The details attending the composition of some of her choicest morceaux are very touching. "Forgotten," "Evening Song," and many others each tell a pathetic story.

For some time after her husband's death Madame Pratten, overcome by grief, laid aside her pen. "At this time," she said, "I thought that I should never write another note." The "soul of music" seemed to have fled from her, but only for a while. Her undaunted spirit soon arose, and bade her realise that

El día 24 de marzo de 2023, acompañado de mi hija Laura, visité el Cementerio de Brompton (Londres) [con más de 200.000 tumbas, muchas de ellas del siglo XIX] que fue fundado en 1840. Volví a visitar el cementerio el día 7 de agosto de 2023 y el 9 de junio de 2024 (acompañado de mis hijas Laura e Inés).

La tumba de Madame Sidney Pratten está en la zona sureste del Gran Círculo (una zona del cementerio que recuerda a la Plaza de Roma). En mi primera visita hice varias fotografías y dejé sobre su tumba, bien protegido en una funda de plástico, a modo de tributo, un ejemplar de mi libro (primera edición), además de fotografiarme junto a ella. Fue un momento muy emotivo e inolvidable para mí.

La tumba de Madame Sidney Pratten es la #41 (parte superior derecha del gran círculo)
(no tenía este plano la primera vez que visité su tumba)

Cuando volví a visitar la tumba el 7 de agosto de 2023, el libro seguía allí, intacto en su funda, tal y como lo dejé. Pero en la visita de 9 de junio de 2024, el libro había desaparecido. Así mismo, tal y como le prometí a Madame Sidney Pratten, siempre que vaya a Londres iré a visitarla.

Han pasado más de 125 años y la tumba está descuidada, las cadenas rotas y nadie la visita. La lápida apenas se puede leer. Todo esto es muy triste para mí.

Guitarras

Entre Madame Sidney Pratten y su hermana Giulia Pelzer reunieron en vida un total de 45 guitarras, 13 de ellas del famoso luthier Louis Panormo y algunas otras que pertenecieron a Giulio Regondi, Leonhard Schulz, María Malibrán (1808-1836) y Fernando Sor (dos guitarras fabricadas por Pierre René Lacôte).

Después de la muerte de Madame Sidney Pratten en 1895, su hermana Giulia Pelzer heredó muchos de sus instrumentos y su archivo, que fueron subastados en Sotheby's en 1938 (el año de la muerte de Giulia Pelzer). Muchos de los archivos y varios instrumentos (un total de 18 guitarras) fueron de nuevo subastados en Christie's el 21 de julio de 1978. Así mismo, otras guitarras de la colección fueron subastadas en Londres, también en 1978, con posterioridad a la subasta de Christie's.

El 10 de marzo de 2022 la casa de subastas Musical Instruments at Gardiner Houlgate anunció la venta de una colección de siete (7) guitarras de Madame Sidney Pratten y otros artículos relacionados. La subasta, que se celebró el 17 de marzo, incluía siete guitarras, una gigelira, partituras originales con anotaciones, un retrato 'watercolor' de Catharina Josepha Pelzer de joven, varias fotografías de la familia Pelzer y diversos artículos, de acuerdo con la siguiente lista que transcribimos literalmente (con algunos añadidos míos en itálica)³³:

Es una de las guitarras que fueron subastadas en Sotheby's en 1938 (lote 211). También se incluyó en el lote de 18 guitarras subastadas por Christie's en 1978.

Dedication

This book, dedicated to the life and guitar work of Madame Sidney Pratten, born Catharina Josepha Pelzer (1824-1895), is my humble and sincere tribute to a fighting woman, a lover of the guitar, an extraordinary concert performer, teacher and trainer, who helped many people to learn to play the guitar and composed intimate and romantic works, very beautiful and pleasant to play, back in the nineteenth century, in Queen Victoria's England and that perfectly represents that "rara avis" that woman is in the wonderful world of the guitar. From the very moment I learned of her existence, I was deeply captivated by this woman and her work. I couldn't help but pay her this tribute.

But, above all, this book is dedicated, with my unlimited love, to my children: Laura, Inés and Artyom.

Artemio Milla Gutiérrez
Valencia (Spain) – 2024

Prologue

The presence of women in the field of the different artistic disciplines has been silenced, throughout history, by obvious social issues that have not favoured its greater or better dissemination.

The long artistic process or the necessary aesthetic reflection has not always been comfortable daily seats available to women with which they have been able to materialize their creative or interpretative spirit; rather, on the contrary. On most occasions they have had to redouble their personal effort in favour of being able to express themselves artistically or, directly, they have had to remove that dedication from their daily lives.

The world of music has not been oblivious to this historical reality. However, in recent years, important work has been carried out to research, recover and review the creative work of many female authors who deserve to occupy a place in the history of sound art.

The guitar, on the other hand, has been adding to the great names of the universal repertoire, composers who, through their work or their interpretive work, have been able to leave a marked mark on its history.

Undoubtedly, one of the main protagonists of this "list yet to be discovered or known" is Catharina Josepha Pelzer, better known in the history of the guitar as Madame Sidney Pratten.

Perhaps, thanks to being born into a family where music was a fundamental pillar, she was able to develop his high artistic gifts widely and freely. She was a child prodigy, daughter of a famous German guitarist of the time, Ferdinand Pelzer, from whom she received her first guitar lessons; she had several sisters who were also dedicated to the world of music; Giulia, Jane and Anne W. and, in addition, she was the wife of Robert James Sidney Pratten, an excellent flutist from whom she took her surname to give her artistic name and with whom she performed chamber concerts.

With this book, Artemio Milla Gutiérrez takes us into the history of this famous concert pianist, composer and prestigious guitar pedagogue, who lived a professional life framed mainly in the society of Victorian England.

This third edition expands on an already interesting and necessary previous version, providing more data and original documentation, practically unknown until now.

We will be able to get closer to the protagonist and learn about her life and professional evolution, as well as having access to extensive bibliographic information and a chosen and select number of images from her catalogue of works and valuable collection of guitars. All this is a very rich contribution to the rediscovery and reassessment of such important characters in the history of the guitar.

The author, Artemio Milla Gutiérrez, Doctor of Economics, philanthropist of the guitar and great fan and scholar of it, does justice to the "historical silence" that presided over her artistic legacy. We must congratulate him and thank him for his vocation as a musicologist, thanks to which we have before us a very valuable work, done with great love and passion, which, without a doubt, will greatly help to know the value and artistic scope of Madame Sidney Pratten.

Personally, I want to thank her for having brought me closer to the figure of Madame Sidney Pratten, as well as to that of other guitarist-composers who are still in artistic limbo.

Introduction

I remember perfectly my first contact with Madame Sidney Pratten. I was watching guitar videos on Youtube a few years ago, in 2011 and, coincidentally, I heard Alex Timmerman¹ play wonderfully and with great sensitivity a beautiful and romantic work composed by Madame Sidney Pratten, called 'Sadness', dedicated to his student and friend John Lindsay Leckie (the brother of Dr. Walter James Leckie, famous disciple and friend of Francisco Tárrega) on a beautiful guitar built in England in 1846 by J. Guiot.

'Sadness' captivated me so much that, in addition to looking for the score and learning to play it (it is a simple, intimate work and surely dedicated in its conception to her husband, Robert James Sidney Pratten, who died in 1868) it made me interested in its author, Madame Sidney Pratten, of whom I had not heard before.

From that moment on, everything related to the life and guitar work of this woman, penetrated the depths of my soul and my heart, as it has never happened with anyone before.

I cannot explain from a logical and rational perspective the emotional bond that unites me with Madame Sidney Pratten, but it is. Perhaps it is because, as I have always told my friends, I was wrong to be born in Spain and in the twentieth century, because I felt very identified with England in the second half of the nineteenth century. The reasons: honor, the sense of chivalry, the word, education, respect, etc. of the high society of that time, which are values that I share in its entirety.

I have a portrait and an original photograph of him in my home office, I have bought two guitars that belonged to Madame Sidney Pratten, I have visited his grave three times in Brompton Cemetery in London (and I will go to visit her every time I go to this city, as I have promised her). On my first visit I left a copy of the first edition of this book in his grave, well protected in a transparent plastic folder that, unfortunately, has been stolen, I have touched his works and, finally, I have written this book financed entirely by me and freely distributed (physical and digital) in his honour, with all my admiration and respect.

Biography

Madame Sidney Pratten (1824-1895), born Catharina Josepha Pelzer, was born on November 15, 1824, in Mülheim-am-Rhein (Germany) ² and died in London (England), on October 10, 1895, leaving an enormous legacy in the form of didactic publications, works and the love of all her students.

She had several siblings, namely³:

- Sarah Pelzer (1825-?)⁴
- Jane Pelzer (1832-1849), who learned to play the guitar and piano and was the favourite student of Ignaz Moscheles (1794-1870), famous composer and pianist. She died, as a young woman, aged 17, shortly before her family left Exeter to return permanently to London.
- Anne Wilhelmina Pelzer (1833-1897),⁵ who played concertina, guitar, and piano, as well as composing and teaching. She married Dr. Julius Althans (1833-1900) in 1859 and gradually retired from teaching to devote herself to her private life. It is not known that they had children.
- Ferdinand Pelzer (1837-1864).
- Julia (Giulia) Gertrude Pelzer (1839-1938), the most famous of them all, guitarist, mandolinist, pianist and music teacher, who accompanied her throughout her life and continued her teaching work after her death.
- Cunigunda Antonia Marie Kratz Pelzer (1841-1878), who later married George Arthur Rooks (1835-1891) in 1876, a lawyer by profession, with whom she had a daughter Cunigunda Agnes M.B. Rooks (1878-1881).
- Christian Pelzer (1842-1845),⁶ who died from ice ingestion.

All of them were the children of Ferdinand Pelzer (1801-1864), a renowned German guitarist, composer, publisher and teacher, who, accompanied by his wife Maria Legrand (1804-1863) and his daughters Sarah Pelzer and Catharina Josepha Pelzer, emigrated to London (England) in 1829. Once in England, Ferdinand Pelzer signed up his daughter Catharina Josepha to teach music theory and composition with the organist and composer William Carnaby (1772-1839).

² Other sources cite her birth in 1821, in fact, on his tomb it says that she died at the age of 74, but as Christopher Page (and other sources consulted) have informed me, her year of birth is 1824, according to the 'Landesarchiv Nordrhein-Westfalen', so she died at the age of 70. I thank Christopher Page for this contribution.

³ It appears that Ferdinand Pelzer and Maria Legrand (here she appears as Anna Maria Legrand) had two more children in Germany, Eduard Pelzer, who died, aged four, on 17 April 1830 and Antonius Hubertus Pelzer, who died, aged one, on 29 April 1830 (born 14 July 1828). The data from the cities of Kofferen (where Ferdinand Pelzer was born) and Trier (where Maria Legrand was born) coincide. However, it is credited that Ferdinand Pelzer and Maria Legrand left Germany together with their daughters Catharina Josepha and Sarah Pelzer in 1829. I am grateful to Karin Vincke for having sent me this information.

Ferdinand Pelzer [Joannes Wilhelmus Ferdinandus Peltzer] was born in Kofferen (Germany) on August 31, 1801, where he began his music studies, starting as a singer and pianist, although he soon opted for guitar and singing and began to earn a living as a singer, teacher and concert guitarist. His parents were Heinrich Anton (Jacob) Peltzer (1775–1839) and Cunigunda Gertrude Kratz (?–1853), who married on March 12, 1801.

This is a handwritten birth registration document from 1801, titled 'P' and '1801'. It lists several births in the village of Kofferen, including the birth of Ferdinand Pelzer on August 31. The entries are organized in columns, with the date and name of the child on the left, and the names of the parents and their place of origin on the right. The handwriting is in a cursive script typical of the early 19th century.

¹⁰ Ferdinand Pelzer was the son of the half-brother of Karin Vincke's great-grandfather.

Arrangement of the play 'Robin Red-Breast' by Anne Wilhelmina Pelzer

On 23 April 1823 he married Maria Legrand, daughter of Peter (Petri) Nikolaus Legrand (1779-?) and Annae Mariae Keuker [Brand] (1779-?) and decided to spend their honeymoon in London. On the voyage they met the English captain George Phillips, who convinced them to stay at his house in Grosvenor Place (London) and introduced them to the English society of the time.

In 1824 Ferdinand Pelzer and Maria Legrand went to visit her parents in Mülheim-am-Rhein and there, on November 15, 1824, Catharina Josepha, their first daughter, was born.

As we have mentioned before, in 1829 Ferdinand Pelzer and his wife decided to return, along with their daughters, Sarah and Catharina Josepha, to London. Within a few months Ferdinand Pelzer gained the public's favour as a guitarist and decided to stay and live there permanently with his family (except for a long intervening stay in Exeter from 1842 to 1849), where he gradually became a very important figure in England.

In 1833 he edited, together with the composers and guitarists Felix Horetzky (1796-1870) and Leonhard Schulz, a magazine called 'The Giulianiad' (from January 1833 to July 1835), in honour of the Italian composer and guitarist Mauro Giuliani (1781-1829), where works for guitar by various authors were published (it was the first magazine of its kind to be published in England) and that same year he published his first pedagogical work: 'Instructions for the Spanish Guitar' which was followed by another called 'Instructions for the Guitar Tuned in E Major' (probably written in Exeter between 1842 and 1849).¹²

¹¹ Although the surname Peltzer appears on the Marriage Certificate, Ferdinand himself signs Pelzer (and did so all his life).

You can read the names of Ferdinand Pelzer, Maria Pelzer, Anne Pelzer, Julia Pelzer and Cunigunda Pelzer¹³

¹³ According to the London Census of 1861, the Pelzer family had returned to Albany Street where only Ferdinand, Maria, Julia, and Cunigunda resided.

It is very possible that his daughter Catharina Josepha drew his ideas from this book to later write her work of the same title.

Some works in the public domain by Ferdinand Pelzer are the following:

- Introduction and Polacca from Caraffa (for two guitars).

Maria Legrand died in London in 1863 and was buried on September 5 at Saint Mary's Catholic Cemetery, Kensal. Ferdinand Pelzer died in London in 1864 and was buried, along with his wife Marie Legrand, on July 15. Both share the same grave number (#6867).¹⁴

¹⁴ I am very sincerely grateful to Malcolm Soares of Saint Mary's Catholic Cemetery for providing me with this information and indicating the place where they are buried.

On June 9, 2024, accompanied by my daughter Laura, I visited Saint Mary's Catholic Cemetery (a beautiful cemetery) which is located next to Kensal Green Cemetery, for all kinds of religions, as the sign [All Souls] says and I took the following photographs:

Pictures of Saint Mary's Catholic Cemetery

*This is the area where Ferdinand Pelzer and Maria Legrand are buried

*The graves in this area lack a tombstone, they are sunk in the earth (they are practically not visible)

Julia (Giulia) Gertrude Pelzer (hereinafter Giulia Pelzer) was born on December 11, 1839, in Marylebone (London), at 39 Great Portland Street and devoted practically her entire life to teaching the guitar (except for a period of 15 years in which she devoted herself to the care of her children, from 1867 to 1882) and continued with the school of her sister Catharina Josepha on her death in 1895.

Her first concert is credited in 1851, at the age of 12, at 45 Dover Street, in Piccadilly (London), together with her sister Anne W. Pelzer, who played piano and concertina and other musicians (a violinist and a cellist). Giulia Pelzer performed works by Giulio Regondi and some duets together with her sister Anne Wilhelmina.

In 1853 she spent a long time at the Benedictine convent of Hammersmith where her father, Ferdinand Pelzer, taught singing, harmony, guitar and piano. She then spent some time at the convent of Notre Dame, where she taught guitar and the English language, before returning to London in 1864, after her father's death, where she began teaching guitar.

Birth Registration of Julia Gertrude Pelzer
Source: Index of Civil Records of Birth, England and Wales, 1837-1915

From the research carried out to try to find living descendants of Giulia Pelzer (since Catharina Josepha Pelzer had no children) I have been able to find the following information:

- There is no record that Henry J. King-Church, John Eyre King-Church, or Ernest E. King-Church had any children.
- Lydia Josephine King-Church married Herbert Stanley Keigwin (1878–1962) and they had five children: Rhoda Marion Keigwin (1904–1985), Joan Keigwin (1905–2000), Philip Henry Keigwin (1906–1931), Barbara Keigwin (1906–1958), and John Jenkyn Keigwin (1909–1997). There is no record of any descendants of Philip Henry Keigwin or Barbara Keigwin.
- Richard Thomas Basset King-Church married Catherine G. Pender (1893-1940) in 1928. There is no record that they had children.
- Rhoda Marion Keigwin married Alan Edward Oliver (1908-1981) in 1933 and they had two sons: Philip Alan Oliver (1942-1993) and Giles Francis Oliver (1948-2020). There is no record of any descendants of Philip Alan Oliver or Giles Francis Oliver.
- Joan Keigwin married Kenneth Wilson Howard Read (1905-1978) and they had three children: Anne Josephine "Josie" Read (1938-1979), Joan Francis Camilla "Kitty" Read (ca. 1943), and Andrew Kenneth Howard Read (1940-2023). Joan Francis Camilla "Kitty" Read married Brian Tulloch (?) and later Charles Donald Liner (?). Neither Anne Josephine "Josie" Read (never married) nor Joan Francis Camilla "Kitty" Read have had children.

Andrew Kenneth Howard Read married Christina Anne Merrick (1943) in 1966 and they had two sons: Benjamin Michael Howard Read¹⁷ (1970) and Daniel Philip Keigwin Read (1972). He later married Caroline Grace (1954) with whom he had two daughters: Katie Read (1985) [who has three children] and Eleanor Read (1990) [has no children].

Benjamin Michael Howard Read is married to Nuala Theresa Horner (1971) and they have two sons: Edward Donal Howard Read (2008) and Jonathan Kenneth Frederick Read (2010). Daniel Philip Keigwin Read is married to Virginia Boehm (ca. 1976) and they have two sons: Matthew Howard George Read (2007) and Robert Andrew Emil Read (2009).

- John Jenkyn Keigwin married Sylvia Margaret Turner (1908–1988) in 1946. They had two children.

Being a mother and teacher, she took mandolin lessons from the great Italian concert performer and composer Ferdinando de Christofaro (1846-1890), considered the best mandolinist in Europe at the time, who also played the piano. In 1887 she got a teaching position at the prestigious Guildhall School of Music in London, as well as continuing to give private guitar and mandolin lessons to her students.

Giulia Pelzer died on 17 September 1938 in Holborn, London, and was buried on 29 September at Highgate East Cemetery, in Highgate, London Borough, Camden, next to her husband, four infant children and son Henry James (who was later transferred to Austria, as his grave reads).

¹⁷ I am grateful to Benjamin Michael Howard Read (Ben Read) for providing me with information about his current family, which has allowed me to build the complete family tree of Ferdinand Pelzer and Maria Legrand, from 1801 to the present day.

MADAME GIULIA PELZER'S GUITAR AND MANDOLINE RECITAL, JUNE 11th, 1901.

From "THE TROUBADOUR," July 20th, 1901.

IT was a fashionable audience which assembled on Tuesday evening, June 11th, at the Steinway Hall, to appreciate a most successful Concert given by Madame Giulia Pelzer, assisted by her pupils. The Hall was well filled, and although the day had been excessively tropical, a cool atmosphere was maintained throughout the evening by means of ice artistically arranged among the palms and flowers which embellished the platform. Madame Pelzer is sister and successor to the late Madame Sidney Pratten, and the major portion of the items on the programme were compositions by that late distinguished guitarist. The proceedings opened with E. German's "Shepherd's Dance," executed by a mandoline trio consisting of Miss Brandon, Miss Beard, and Miss Swinyard. During the evening these talented ladies again appeared, Miss Brandon rendering a mandoline solo, Etudes No. 13 and 14 (De Beriot), and a duet with Miss Beard, while Miss Nellie Swinyard came forward with a mandoline solo, "Salut d'Amour" (Elgar). The Misses Griffith supplied two vocal duets, "Come with thy Lute" (Pratten) and "Comme un posse vivre" (Pratten), to their own guitar and mandoline accompaniment. Col. Temple gave two guitar solos, 1. "Andante Pastorale" (F. Sor), 2—"Farewell to the Old Year" (Pratten), for which he received well-merited applause, while Mr. Henry D. Truscott was accorded an encore for his guitar songs, "An Old Ballad" (by desire) and "Polish Volkslied" ("Tell me now"). An excellent Spanish vocalization was given by Miss Pitt, Miss Yarrow, and Miss Lily Eckstein, who has a credit balance of intelligence in her favour, although barely 12 years of age. In addition, Miss Eckstein played a charming mandoline solo, which earned for her a distinguished service reward. Mrs. E. J. W. Gibb possesses a voice of unique range, and the delightful manner in which she interpreted, in the national tongue, Bizet's

"Habanera" (Carmen) gave satisfaction to a high degree. Mrs. Gibb furnished her own guitar accompaniment. A guitar duet was also contributed by Miss Atkinson and Miss Hetty Hamilton. The bonne bouche was of course the playing of Madame Pelzer, and at the conclusion of several guitar duets, of which "Andante Expressivo," No. 1, was certainly la première, there was a tremendous outburst of applause. A keen sense of pleasure was felt when two magnificent bouquets were presented to Madame, who at first did not notice the gift, thereby causing a little mirth.

Extract from "THE LADY," June 20th, 1901.

Madame Giulia Pelzer, sister of the late Madame Sidney Pratten, and her pupils were responsible for a most enjoyable guitar and mandoline recital at the Steinway Hall on the 11th inst. Both the solo and ensemble playing were very finished and pleasing, the mandoline solos by Miss Brandon—who gave two of De Beriot's etudes—Miss Lily Eckstein, and Miss Nellie Swinyard being especially noticeable. Colonel Temple played as guitar solos Madame Pratten's "Farewell to the Old Year" and Sor's "Andante Pastorale," and Madame Pelzer won much applause for her performance of her sister's composition, "Twilight." Mr. Henry D. Truscott's traditional guitar songs were welcome contributions, and a Spanish song by the Misses Pitt, Yarrow, and Eckstein was another effective work from Madame Pratten's pen. Some guitar duets by Miss Atkinson and Miss Hetty Hamilton included Garibaldi, Indian, and military marches, and amongst the performers were the Misses Beard, Griffith, Pitt, and Mrs. E. J. W. Gibb, who sang the "Habanera" from "Carmen," and Messrs. Arthur Dipstale and F. Black.

Catharina Josepha Pelzer (later Madame Sidney Pratten) was born on November 15, 1824, and was a child prodigy of the guitar. Her first professional concert, with his father, took place in 1833, at the Kings Theatre (London).

Lithograph of Catharina Josepha Pelzer by Charles Baugniet (1853)

Between 1834 and 1836 she performed as a duo with the Italian guitarist Giulio Regondi (1822-1872), another child prodigy of the guitar, with whom she maintained a sincere friendship throughout her life. Her concerts and recitals inspired many people to learn to play the guitar, including Princesses Louise [Duchess of Argyll (1848-1939)] and Beatriz [Princess of the United Kingdom (1857-1944)], daughters of Queen Victoria of England, to whom she was a teacher.

The musical public was, indeed, privileged at this time. The infant prodigies—Catherina Josepha Pelzer and Giulio Regondi—had met, and were brought out together. Such diminutive performers were “lost” on a large platform; so, to be seen as well as heard, they were mounted upon a table. Madame Pratten often used to speak of these days when she played duets with Regondi, whose abilities she always highly praised.

It may be interesting to add that Fraulein Pelzer played on a “Terz” guitar—a small-sized instrument.

'Reminiscences of Madame Sidney Pratten', p. 20

In 1841 the Pelzer family resided in Albany Street, St. Pancras, Middlesex, in London (except Catharina) and in 1842 they went to live in Exeter, where they lived at 6 Longbrook Street, to return to London again, in 1849, the year of Jane Pelzer's death. It was in Exeter that Catharina Josepha Pelzer began to give guitar lessons and later entered London society as a concert performer, thanks to the support of Lady John Somerset, who left her a room for classes and for intimate salon concerts, very popular at the time.

MISS Pelzer—at seventeen years of age—established herself as a teacher of the guitar in Exeter. She received in that city liberal support from a fashionable clientèle. Perhaps the most fortunate event of her professional life occurred here. Lady John Somerset took a great fancy to the young guitariste, and persuaded her to go to London. Her ladyship gave Miss Pelzer apartments in her own residence, and introduced her to the nobility as an instructress, which soon brought her into fame.

'Reminiscences of Madame Sidney Pratten', p. 26-27

Catharina Josepha Pelzer artistically took the middle name and surname of her husband, Robert James Sidney Pratten (1824-1868), after his death, as she felt great love and admiration for him, changing her professional name to Madame Sidney Pratten.

Their first marital home was at 131B Oxford Street, in London, later moving to a better area, in Cavendish Square. It is known that in 1861 the couple resided in Welbeck Street, in Marylebone, Middlesex.

Robert James Sidney Pratten was born on January 23, 1824, and was a famed self-taught flutist, especially recognized for having incorporated notable advances in the technique and construction of the flute to improve its sound and performance.

On 25 March 1835, at the age of 11, he made his debut as a flutist at The Theatre Royal (Dublin), performing a work called 'O dolce concerto', subsequently moving to London in 1845. The Duke of Cambridge was interested in his musical gifts and sent him to Leipzig (Germany) in 1846 to study composition, where he composed his popular work 'L'Espérance', in 1847.

Announcement of a Robert James Sidney Pratten Concert on November 26, 1846

Announcement of a Robert James Sidney Pratten Concert Berliner Musikzeitung, July 7, 1847

In 1848 he returned to London, where he performed as first flutist in various orchestras, including The Royal Italian Opera House, The English Opera, The Sacred Harmonic, The Philharmonic and The Theatre Royal, in which he stood out for his powerful sound and the brilliant execution of the works.

However, given his practically self-taught character, except for the time spent in Leipzig and concerned about his lack of training, he decided to take lessons in music theory and counterpoint with the famous composer, conductor and cellist Charles Lucas (1808-1869).

As we have mentioned above, Robert James Sidney Pratten and Catharina Josepha Pelzer were married on September 24, 1854. The couple performed works together on many occasions, to the delight of music lovers. They formed a very happy marriage, loved and admired by all their friends and students and were very close all their lives, until the sad death of Robert James Sidney Pratten in 1868.

As an anecdote, we will point out that Catharina Josepha Pelzer suffered, at times, from stage fright (like her father Ferdinand Pelzer) and that, to calm her nerves, her husband sat in the front row of the auditorium and, gently and discreetly, marked the rhythm of the play he was playing. Also, to help her with this problem, they used to play duos together for flute and guitar.

During his lifetime, Robert James Sidney Pratten wrote several publications for the flute, special studies for the diatonic flute of Siccama and for his own perfected instrument, as well as various arrangements of opera airs.

On November 22, 1867, during a performance of 'Elijah', at Exeter Hall, he began to feel ill and, although he hardly stood up, he finished playing the 'obbligato' of 'O Rest in the Lord', as fantastically well as ever, but he could not continue and was forced to be assisted and leave the orchestra.

Robert James Sidney Pratten died shortly afterwards on 10 February 1868 at Ramsgate General Hospital in London and was buried on 12 February at Ramsgate St. George Church, Kent.

The death of her husband was very sad and painful for Catharina Josepha Pelzer. A phrase of hers is remembered that appears in the book 'Reminiscences of Madame Sidney Pratten', written in 1899 by Frank Mott Harrison (1866-1945) in which she points out that 'her years of marriage were like being in heaven, but on earth'.

For the next three years she did not perform in public (although with some exceptions) nor published any plays.

In 1872 she decided, together with her sister Giulia Pelzer, to establish her own guitar school in Southampton Street (Bloomsbury Square), in London.

During her lifetime she published several works of a didactic nature. In 1859 she published 'Guitar School' (perhaps his most complete teaching work) composed of 236 exercises and studies, including progressive exercises, diagrams, exercises for both hands, arrangements, studies and works by various composers.

Cover of 'Guitar School'

But she soon realized that this book was too demanding for beginners. Thus, highly concerned about enabling all guitar enthusiasts to enjoy it and aware that many people either did not have enough skill to play it or, simply, did not have the necessary time to practice it, it brought to light various publications, among which is a manual called 'Learning the Guitar Simplified', published in 1874, which was quite successful at the time and includes arrangements and minor works for the practice of the guitar (alone and with voice), as well as some works by well-known authors.

The manual included simple exercises, each of which was followed by an easy-to-play work, along with diagrams and corresponding fingering notes and finger position on the neck and frets, all to facilitate student learning.

In 1881, and in two volumes, she published 'The Guitar Tutor', which contained exercises and technical studies, arrangements, examples and works by various authors, especially Fernando Sor (1778 - 1839) and Mauro Giuliani, two of his favourite composers.

Madame Pratten found, when she commenced teaching the guitar, that the amateur pupil was not inclined to devote sufficient study to the instrument to gain the necessary technique to grapple with the difficulties of the music of the classic authors for the guitar. The works of Giuliani and Sor, Legnani, Nüske and Schulz were beyond the powers of the average student. She therefore commenced to produce some suitable pieces for her pupils. These pieces require no commendation from my pen, their own reputation is sufficient, for what guitar player has not discovered their worth?

'Reminiscences of Madame Sidney Pratten', p. 58-59

'Guitar Tutor' covers (Part I and Part II)

She also suggested to her students, in order to prevent the strings of the guitar from breaking, that the note E of the sixth string be lowered by one tone (D), a change that she also applied when she played the guitar alone, pointing out that the notes produced a better vibration and a better tone.

In another of her didactic publications, called 'Colored Diagrams of the Notes of the Fingerboard of the Guitar', she used colours to identify each note in the diatonic scale and allow a more pleasant learning of the notes and their positions to the student.

This diagram applies to the little E gut string, being thinner requires two twists under and a loop or double knot to prevent it jumping out at the bottom.

12 The cause of the third remark may be, that the strings are bad, or some defect at the bridge, nut, or machine, (which cuts the strings) or, the Guitar is tuned too high.

13 To avoid the inconvenience of the strings breaking, I suggest to my pupils to tune the strings of the Guitar a whole note lower. Tuning the E silver string to D of the Piano, and the other notes in rotation, by this means the strings are not so hard to press down, nor so liable to break.

14 Unless playing with other instruments, for my own playing, I generally tune my Guitar a whole note lower, as above suggested, by that means the strings vibrate better and a more sympathetic tone is produced. See page 4. No. 15^a

Also, and as a curiosity, we will say that she was a great defender of the tuning of the guitar in E major (in fact, she composed many works in this key), as evidenced by her publication in 1882 of 'Instructions for the Guitar Tuned in E Major', which includes arrangements and minor works for the practice of the guitar in this key (surely she got this idea from the method that, with the same title, her father, Ferdinand Pelzer, had published years earlier).

Cover of 'Instructions for the Guitar Tuned in E Major'

In addition to the guitar, which was evidently his main instrument, she also devoted herself (especially at the teaching level) to the English concertina, invented by Sir Charles Wheatstone (1802-1875) in 1829 and the gigelira, a type of xylophone.

Madame Sidney Pratten was the teacher of Frank Mott Harrison (writer and editor), who on the death of his teacher dedicated to her a wonderful book, cited above, whose reading I highly recommend, called 'Reminiscences of Madame Sidney Pratten' (1899) and by Ernest Shand.

She was also the teacher of many students (more than 2,000 according to Frank Mott Harrison) and of some illustrious and well-known characters, such as the aforementioned daughters of Queen Victoria, Princesses Louise and Beatriz, dedicating to the first of them her work 'The Princess Louise, Op. 70', for piano and guitar, Lady John Somerset [Lady Catherine Annesley (1793-1865)], Albert F. Cramer (1865-1931), sisters Ada Mary (1870-1922) and Edith Nina Tulloch (ca. 1873-?) and doctors Walter James Leckie (1846-1925) [close friend and later student of Francisco Tárrega (1852-1909)]¹⁹ and John Lindsay Leckie (1844-1900). To the latter she dedicated her works 'Sadness', Op. 91, 'A Lost Love', Op. 92 and 'A Lament', Op. 93, while to Dr. Walter James Leckie she dedicated her works 'Hungarian March', Op. 58, 'Progressive Preludes and Pieces for Guitar' and 'Dance of the Witches', Op. 83.

¹⁹ It is accredited that Madame Sidney Pratten and Francisco Tárrega met and that they professed mutual admiration. In 1881 they shared a concert in London.

Ada Mary (guitar) and Edith Nina Tulloch (who derived her career towards singing as a soprano) were part of the group called "The Misses Tulloch", a plural stage group formed with her sisters Olive (1881 - 1974) [child actress], Dora Lillian (1878 - 1945) [recitation and drama] and Minnie Beryl (1876 - 1957) [mandolin], as confirmed by the title of the report of "The Sketch" of October 11, 1893, "A Quintette of Talent", which throughout the 1890s offered a traveling salon show that the press itself classified as "vocal, instrumental and dramatic recitals".

The professional advertisement inserted in The Musical Times of April 1897 details precisely the nature of the repertoire; it is reproduced verbatim:

THE MISSES TULLOCH'S VOCAL, INSTRUMENTAL, AND DRAMATIC RECITALS. OPERATIC SCENAS AND ARIAS. BALLADS. MANDOLINE AND GUITAR SOLOS AND DUETS. ITALIAN, FRENCH, AND GERMAN SONGS. SPANISH SONGS TO GUITAR ACCOMPANIMENTS. RECITATIONS (POETIC AND HUMOROUS). For Press notices and Programmes, address, Miss D. HOW TO PLAY THE GUITAR.

By MADAME SIDNEY PRATTEN, Teacher to Her Royal Highness the Princess Louise.

THE EDITOR has asked me to write an article on How to Play the Guitar, but I fear it will be rather difficult to do so clearly, as the various effects that can be produced can really only be attained by personal instruction or by seeing and hearing the instrument played by an experienced performer.

The guitar is a charming and graceful instrument, capable of much execution, intense pathos, and a variety of effects, peculiarly its own, and is admirably adapted as an accompaniment to the voice.

An eminent composer in eulogising the merits of the guitar says, with much truth, that although it has not the power of some large instruments, it has its revenge in its delicate sweetness and sympathetic tones.

The guitar now in use is called the Spanish Guitar, with six strings, it having superseded the old English guitar, a very inferior kind, of different shape and construction.

There is a very interesting article by Mr. Hopkins on the guitar, and guitars ancient and modern, in the new edition of "Dictionary of Music and Musicians," edited by Geo. Grove, D.C.L. I will therefore not enlarge on the subject.

The Spanish guitar was introduced into England about sixty or seventy years ago, as an artistic instrument, by a Spaniard, Ferdinand Sor, who had written some of the most exquisite and suitable pieces.

It is recorded, in Hogarth's "History of the Philharmonic Society," that Ferdinand Sor played a solo on the guitar at one of their concerts, when they were held at the Argyll Rooms, Regent Street.

About the same time there was another celebrated player and composer, an Italian, Mauro Giuliani, who resided in Vienna, and no doubt he brought the guitar into use in Germany.

He was a very prolific writer, and his numerous compositions (some hundreds), mostly very difficult, were published in Paris, London, and Vienna. He also wrote three concertos, with orchestral accompaniments the third concerto was esteemed so good that it was arranged for the pianoforte by Hummel.

The most popular writers for the guitar abroad were the above named, and Carulli, Kreutzer, Kuffner, and Legnani; and in London, Sola, Nuske, and Neuland. The last-named wrote some lovely duetts for guitar and pianoforte, published by Chappell. The plates, I understand, are destroyed, but now that playing upon the guitar is becoming more general again, it is to be hoped that they may be reprinted.

Last, but not least, I must mention the modern genius of the guitar, Leonard Schulz; his original compositions are gems. He died in 1860. There were many fine players on the guitar who resided in London, but they have all passed away; the last remaining one was Giulio Regondi, who died a few years ago, after a lingering illness. He was also the first one who played the concertina, which he did to perfection. His compositions for the guitar and concertina are very difficult.

Guitars are made abroad; those made in Spain, the Spanish model, are larger and thicker than those made in France and Germany. The guitar shown in the illustration is of French make, as that particular shape is more adapted for a lady than the

and third fingers, raising the wrist sufficiently high to enable the three fingers to strike the three strings under the thumb. In striking a chord the thumb should fall on the first finger, resting between the first and second joints, with the knuckles slightly raised.

The great thing to avoid on the guitar is twanging and jarring.

Twanging is the result of pulling up the strings with the right hand fingers, which causes them to vibrate up and down, and to jingle against the frets, but if struck gently sideways that is avoided.

Jarring the strings is caused by the left hand not pressing the fingers sufficiently tight near the frets.

It is difficult to explain how the left hand should be held, because different chords very often require a different movement of the fingers, wrist, and position of the arm.

Sometimes the arm or elbow is held in, and the left hand grasping the neck of the guitar, perhaps the next chord may require the elbow to move out and to hollow the hand, the third movement may require the wrist to be held out, and so on.

A group of notes, which may appear almost impossible to take in one position of the hand, becomes quite simple by another movement, so that here the experienced teacher is required. The natural way to hold the hand is to grasp the neck of the guitar between the thumb and first finger, holding out the other fingers and the arm slightly away from the body. Hold the wrist back. Then place your first, second, and third fingers in rotation on the first, second, and third frets of the small gut string, having placed your fingers obliquely, then let your thumb be on the opposite side, facing the second finger.

By putting down the fingers obliquely the distances are more easily reached than by placing them straight.

The six open strings are tuned to the following notes of the pianoforte:—

larger ones. Of the six open strings three are silver and three gut.

The metal lines across the finger-boards (the front of the neck) are called frets; each produces an interval of a semi-tone by pressing the fingers of the left hand on any of the strings in rotation.

To hold the guitar properly is very essential to enable you to play with ease. It must be so held that both hands are free to move about without the instrument changing its position. It is more comfortable to sit on a low chair rather than on one too high.

Rest the guitar on the left knee, raising the foot sufficiently high on a footstool, or otherwise, so that the instrument rests between the chest and the knee, without stooping.

Place the right arm easily on the guitar; put down the little finger on the sounding board; strike the three silver strings with the thumb, the three gut strings with the first, second,

Notes of the Piano in the Bass Clef. Treble Clef.

The student will observe that the strings of the guitar are tuned to the notes of the piano in the bass clef, but that the guitar notes are written in the treble clef an octave higher.

It will be seen that the guitar notes are written an octave higher than they sound, or, vice versa, the guitar sounds an octave lower than the notation. Although the guitar sounds

Ernest Shand (born Ernest William Watson) was born on January 31, 1868 in Hull (Yorkshire) in England and was a famous singer and music hall actor, comedian and a prolific composer for guitar and great concert performer, who had a lot of repercussion in the newspapers of the time (almost mainly in his facet as a singer and actor); in fact, until the appearance of Julian Bream (1933-2020) there has not been such an important concert guitarist in England after Ernest Shand, today a figure unjustly almost forgotten by the guitar community.

His parents were William Tindill Watson (1835-1899) and Jane Coverdale (1838-1928).

Ernest Shand began his studies with the violin but opted for the guitar after discovering a composition by the great Spanish guitarist Dionisio Aguado (1784-1849).

Before the age of 30 he had composed more than 150 works for guitar, a guitar concerto, the first in the United Kingdom: Premier Concert pour Guitare et Quatuor ou Guitare et Piano, Op. 48, which was premiered in 1896 and was not performed again until 1947 by Julian Bream and a method for the instrument: Improved Method for the Guitar, Op. 100.

There are 52 works by Ernest Shand whose opus numbers are unknown. Likewise, there are 107 works that are unknown or are unlocated (or lost). In total 80 works survive, to which we can add a total of 20 unpublished short works found in the 'Improved Method for the Guitar, Op. 100.'

He was, without a doubt, Madame Sidney Pratten's best student, to whom she told when they met, in 1888, that "she had nothing to teach him anymore and that his compositions were superior to hers", although it is accredited that she gave him lessons, above all, to improve the sound and interpretation of the guitar.

Ernest Shand married Louisa Nelly Shand (1871–1948), ballet dancer and actress, in 1890, with whom he had two daughters: Phyllis Shand Watson (1895–1985) and Eileen Shand Watson (1905–?). There was also an adopted son, Ernest Shand Watson (1901–?).

From that day they maintained a close and lasting friendship until the death, in 1895, of Madame Sidney Pratten, who edited some of his works. In fact, Ernest Shand became one of the main sponsors of the book 'Reminiscences of Madame Sidney Pratten', written by Frank Mott Harrison in 1899, already mentioned and his Funeral March, Op. 89, is dedicated to the death of Madame Sidney Pratten in 1895.

²⁰ The 'Music Hall and Theatre Review' began publication on April 6, 1889, with the last issue published being that of September 5, 1912.

In the same year Ernest Shand was appointed a member of the Board of Examiners of the Guild of Violinists of London and in early 1896 of its Senate.

Ernest Shand's guitar work comprises a wide range of music, including salon works, variations, fantasies, songs, chamber music, piano works, transcriptions, and pedagogical works. His last work, 'Introduction et Chanson', was published in 1911.

To understand Ernest Shand's level of guitar, here is a review of the 'Newcastle Evening Chronicle' of March 3, 1893 that places Ernest Shand on a par with the great virtuoso Giulio Regondi: "Shand is an accomplished artist on the guitar. Since the time of Regondi, few have accomplished wonders with that difficult but delightful instrument as Shand."

Despite his success as a composer and guitarist, Ernest Shand devoted himself mainly to performing as a comedian in music halls (from 1886) and only in the last years of his life (in 1918 he moved to Birmingham), encouraged by his wife and friends, did he devote himself to playing the guitar professionally.

We must remember that, in the second half of the nineteenth century, in England, it was mostly women who practiced the guitar, with men, where appropriate, dedicated to teaching it.

Some works in the public domain by Ernest Shand²¹ are the following:

Frank Mott Harrison²² , based in Hove, was a writer, journalist and editor as well as the owner of a musical instrument shop in Brighton (with his brother Richard, a mandolinist), a close friend and pupil of Madame Sidney Pratten. His wife was Alice Mary Pegg (1872–1959), whose father was Madame Sidney Pratten's personal secretary during the last years of her life. He also received a PhD in Philosophy from the Faculty of Music at the University of London (1935), with a doctoral thesis on "Music in seventeenth-century England and the Puritan influence".

He lived at 11 Denmark Villas (circa 1910) and, from 1914 until the late 1940s, at 3 Bigwood Avenue. He was a member of Hove City Council for more than twenty years and in February 1942 he was appointed honorary councillor (Alderman).

The importance of Frank Mott Harrison in the life of Madame Sidney Pratten is undeniable, not in vain he was the author, as we have already pointed out, of the book 'Reminiscences of Madame Sidney Pratten' (1899) and, in addition, he personally took care of everything necessary to manage the funeral and burial of Madame Sidney Pratten in Brompton Cemetery, in London.

The book had its origin in a series of articles that Frank Mott Harrison published during 1897 and 1898 in 'The Troubadour' (a newspaper of the time) and which immediately enjoyed the sympathy of the readers.

²² Although the exact date of birth in 1866 is not known, it is accredited that he was baptized on April 1, in St. Nicholas (Brighton).

Practically nothing is known about the life of Frank Mott Harrison, except for what has already been commented and for the enormous success that his book 'John Bunyan. A Story of his Life' and for the important donation he made on 29 September 1938, to the mayor, aldermen and burghers of the Bedford district of his collection of more than 800 volumes of writings by and about John Bunyan²³ and which is now available to the public at the Bedford Public Library.

²³ John Bunyan (1628-1688) was an English writer and preacher famous for his novel 'The Pilgrim's Progress' (1678).

Frank Mott Harrison dedicated a poem to some of the works of his teacher and friend that we present below²⁴:

. TO .

Mme. Sidney Pratten,

Whose charming compositions for the Guitar, tell, in their own peculiar language, many a tale—

Of "ELFIN'S REVELS," and of hob-goblin intrusions,
Of strange imaginations, of curious delusions.
The "DANCE OF THE WITCHES"—a "DANSE FANTAS-TIQUE,"
The "SPANISH DANCE"—a dance most realistic.
Pretty little "QUEEN MAB" and hideous "PUCK" we find
Are skilfully portrayed by thy poetic mind.
The sky we see with dark clouds overcast,
And stormy "RAIN" in torrents pouring fast ;
And then, as though by magic skill—to everyone's delight
The scene at thy command is adorn'd with "SUNSHINE,"
bright.
Thou tellest tales of "ALICE" and of sweet "VIOLET,"
Which are in strange contrast to the tale of the
"COQUETTE."
At times thou art "WEARY," and seem'st "FORGOTTEN,"—
And yet, surely, thou can'st not be so, often ?
To thy departed "TREUE LIEBE"—when lost in
"REVERIE"
We seem to hear thy notes exclaim—"I'm still
"DREAMING OF THEE."
By "A LAMENT" and "SADNESS," and filled with many
fears
Through the "ABSENCE" of "A LOST LOVE"—thou wast
brought to "TEARS."
We hear at "EVENTIDE" thy sweet "EVENING SONG"
Wafted through the "TWILIGHT" and echoing along—
To the far-off realms of space, to the star-lit land so bright,
Where 'tis lost to human ear in the soft beams of
"MOONLIGHT."
From the land of the Guitar, and the home of the
"SERENADE,"
"A SPANISH ROMANCE" is briefly told of gallant knight
and maid.

* * * * * *

Then solemn thoughts our minds inspire, when at the midnight hour we hear
Mournful strains from thy Guitar, as thou bid'st "FARE-WELL TO THE OLD YEAR."
When o'er the world of Fancy with thee our hearts may
roam,
Thou bringest us back from "DREAMLAND" to "HOME
SWEET HOME."

²⁴ 'Reminiscences of Madame Sidney Pratten' (1899).

In the same way, Madame Sidney Pratten, in her letters sent to Frank Mott Harrison, commented on the form and manner in which she had been inspired to compose some of her works, as well as other aspects of her personality and enormous sensitivity, the content of which we present below for their interest²⁵:

Appendix.

The following letters will convey to those readers who were not in correspondence with the late Madame Sidney Pratten an idea of her mode of expression and of her enthusiasm. In fact, her letters always showed her temperament at the time of writing. In some it is easy to trace the light happy heart—while others give vent to a dreamy sentiment which often possessed her when suffering from trouble or fatigue :—

I. HER COMPOSITIONS.

“I did nothing original in the way of composing until my 19th Divertissement—then came ‘Tears’ and ‘Lord Raglan’; then the ‘Serenade’; then ‘Absence’; and then I went on until my husband died. . . . After that my composing powers were blank for a long time. Then I suddenly began a different style — left off variations and begun ‘Sensucht’ and ‘Weary’ and so on, until my moods changed from sad to gay, with my little stories; and that was caused by the happy visits among friends and admirers of my guitar-playing. So my surroundings helped me to tumble into my various moods and styles.”

²⁵ ‘Reminiscences of Madame Sidney Pratten’ (1899).

2. SHELLEY'S POEM.

" How kind of you to send me the lovely poem of Shelley on the guitar. Yes, how it seems to speak to us—and we who love and dream of the guitar as I do. It seems to speak also to me of the very things I have composed in my various moods—to describe one's soul, its feelings of love, joy and sorrow; and the description of beautiful Nature. . . ."

3. WOMAN'S LIFE.

" I have never sought publicity as a matter of vanity for myself; I have upheld my dignity for the (sake) of the supposed slight on my loved guitar, which I felt was, should and might be, the future poetry of human souls; and as such I have endeavoured to inculcate into the minds of my aristocratic pupils their power to render a poem of woman's life and woman's mission—to soothe invalids and cheer up sad souls."

4. HER 'INSPIRATIONS.'

"I do think that 'Eventide' is one of my most lovely inspirations—I cannot say that I composed them, because I do not know when I shall do anything. I simply take up my guitar and out of the tips of my fingers tumble out the sounds on the strings . . . and then I play it over and over again until my brain retains it ; then sketch it down . . . Then I leave it, and return to it and put it 'ship-shape.' Then, with my 'little bricks' collected, I build up a romance or a story. My 'Twilight' was done as the sun was going down far below the hills, at Mr. Collard's lovely place (which was on a hill). It was so curious to see the large ball of fire gradually gliding down behind the hill and shedding around, in its disappearance, the golden glow of a glorious sunset—and then all gradually 'hushed up'—birds and people and animals."

5. HER HEALTH.

" I cannot get up my strength—the weather is so against me. I cannot get out for fresh air, so gain no strength. . . . I go on with my guitar teaching, and playing to my pupils—I feel to live again, and for the moment forget how ill and weak I feel. My life is lonely—I have risen to a height in my guitar world, beyond all I could ever realise ; and, no doubt [in] the sadness of my lonely life I seek the companionship of the sweet tones of the guitar. And then, the thought and beating of my own heart produce the soothing music and come from the tips of my fingers."

AS FRIEND : HER CHARITY.

It is not my intention to proclaim to the world the good deeds of our late friend—they are too well known to those upon whom they were bestowed. The mention of a few acts of her charitable nature will enable those who did not know her intimately to form a more exact opinion of the character of Madame Sidney Pratten, who, although always ready to render service to those deserving help, keenly felt imposition when it was her misfortune to discover such.

“My charity is no virtue” she used to say, “I am only impulsive!” But impulse is, surely, the outlet of a sympathetic nature?

I am indebted to Mr. Pegg for the following anecdotes of Madame Sidney Pratten’s life :—

“On one occasion, whilst passing down one of the streets leading into Oxford Street, Madame Pratten saw a poor woman walking along, carrying a baby, and apparently almost without a piece of shoe to her feet. Madame Pratten stopped her, and after making some enquiries, she at once took off her own boots and gave them to the woman, and returned home in a cab, shoeless !”

“One day when riding in a hand-chair on the Brighton front, Madame Pratten heard the sound of a guitar. It was a young man and his wife playing one of her compositions. She was very much interested, and told them who she was. She played one of her pieces to them—greatly to the delight of the promenaders. This was probably the one and only occasion upon which Madame Pratten played in the open air publicly."

"Finding one day that her hand-chair man was ill-clad (at Brighton) Madame Pratten gave him sufficient money to equip himself with a new overcoat, etc., remaining in the chair by herself while he adjourned to the nearest clothier's shop."

Mr. Pegg further adds: "It was no unusual thing for Madame Pratten to sit up writing until four or five o'clock in the morning. She would be up again at eight o'clock ready to receive the first post. For years she only allowed herself about five hours in bed."

As a performer and pedagogue, he began his teaching career and obtained a position at the Trinity College of Music in London in 1897. He was also a composer of salon pieces for guitar - the critic Richard Long, in the magazine Soundboard (2002), attributes to him "a poetic soul" and "interesting harmonies" -, with not a few affinities with Ernest Shand. Among his guitar works and arrangements we can mention: Le Ruisseau, Flores, Home Sweet Home and Song Without Words (original work by Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy [1809-1847]).

Some comments on Madame Sidney Pratten's concerts in the local press, commenting on her skill with the guitar and her way of playing were the following:

- 'A concert took place this morning in Hanover Square Rooms, the first of three announced for the season, which was attended by numerous personalities. Ms. Pelzer contributed in a high degree to the gratification of the audience and was cordially and deservedly applauded for her efforts.'²⁸
- 'She amazed her listeners with her amazing guitar playing. This young girl produced effects on the instrument of which we had no previous conception. She was able to play three brilliant pieces accompanied by her father, to the rhythm of the general admiration that both provoked. Her touch is powerful and her execution is wonderful. We were amazed at how her tiny fingers could extract such perfect sounds from an instrument that requires some strength to make the music more eloquent.'²⁹
- 'Madame Pratten, one of the most accomplished guitarists in the country, having twisted her left hand a few days before, in this performance, playing a Serenade and Lord Raglan's March, both of her own composition, exhibited admirable qualities of execution and style which place her in the foremost rank of legitimate guitarists.'³⁰

Frank Mott Harrison's book, 'Reminiscences of Madame Sidney Pratten' also echoes the content of some concerts, as we point out below:

On Wednesday,
May 17th, 1871, under the patronage of
Her Serene Highness Princess Edward
of Saxe-Weimar, the Duchess of Wellington,
the Duchess of Roxburgh, the Marchioness of Westminster, and other members of the aristocracy, she gave a recital in which she played Giuliani's
Third Concerto (1st movement) to the pianoforte accompaniment of Madame Lucei-Sievers (a niece of M. Giuliani, the composer). In 1873, on Thursday,
June 19th, under the same patronage,
Madame Pratten announced a recital in which she was aided by great artistes, including some of the members of M.
Gounod's Choir—accompanied by Mrs.
Weldon.

Madame Pratten played the guitar part (with the orchestra) in Mr. Cowen's famous work "The Corsair" at its production in 1876 at the Birmingham Festival; but I am unable to say with what success. I should imagine that the instrument was out of place in such a performance. I have seen the guitar part from which she played—and Madame Pratten considered the tone of one guitar too feeble to be effective in such a work.

Reminiscences of Madame Sidney Pratten, p. 39

In general and throughout the guitar life of Madame Sidney Pratten (and also of Giulia Pelzer, her sister), various local English newspapers published, in the section of echoes of society, news related to her concerts, classes, publications, stays, etc., among which The Morning Post (London), The Birmingham Daily Mail (Birmingham), The Observer (London) and The Daily Telegraph (London) stand out; since, as we have pointed out, Madame Sidney Pratten was a well-known woman in her time, both as a guitarist and teacher as well as in her personal facet, as well as being a woman much loved among her students, friends and acquaintances.

Below we review some 'clippings' extracted from newspapers of the time echoing the concerts of Madame Sidney Pratten.

"Musical Opinion,"
APRIL, 1893.

"Both professional and amateur guitarists will greet with pleasure the newly published compositions for the guitar from the pen of Madame Sidney Pratten, who has just issued a number of fresh solos. Especially delightful is the set of three pieces, 'Sadness,' 'A Love Love,' and a 'Lament.' There is also a stirring march, 'Ereilda.' Each one of these pieces is imbued with that charming fascination so characteristic of Madame Pratten's music. The remaining pieces—'A Norwegian March,' 'Wandering Thoughts,' 'See-Saw,' 'Forget-me-not,' and a 'Paisant Dance'—are all pleasing in their way, and while displaying the capabilities of the guitar, they fully demonstrate the composer's genius."

"The Musical Standard,"
NOVEMBER 11th, 1893.

OTHER CONCERTS.

"A few lines will serve with regard to the Misses Fullock's vocal, instrumental, and dramatic festival, given at the St. James Hall, on Saturday afternoon last. The hall was amply filled by a sympathetic audience. Madame Sidney Pratten, who rarely appears in public, consented to play two of her 'admirable' guitar solos, viz., 'A Spanish Romance,' and 'Lord Raglan's March.' The former was from time to time verbally illustrated by the performer. The execution's dexterity in both pieces naturally commanded much interest, and gained an encore which was described as illustrative of a feature of Norwegian life, and the order of events was explained by Madame Pratten in an amusingly lucid manner."

"Winter's Weekly Magazine,"
NOVEMBER, 1893.

"I went to the afternoon entertainment given by the Misses Fullock at the St. James Hall, on Saturday, the 4th. The hall was crowded with a friendly and rather chilly audience, which, however, gradually warmed up as the programme progressed. A very welcome item in the programme was a guitar solo by Madame Sidney Pratten. Madame Pratten only plays her own compositions—at least she only played them on this occasion—and she went to the trouble of apologizing for the explanation which she gave as one of the pieces progressed. It was a most needless thing to do, for the audience rose at the lady, and, if she had been willing, I think they would have kept her playing till now."

Madame Sidney Pratten gave her annual concert on Thursday at the Beethoven Rooms, introducing a selection of music for an instrument, the guitar, in the performance of which she may honestly be said to be unrivalled. But it was not only for the exhibition of her own powers the concert was undertaken but also for the advantage presented to introduce her pupils, one of whom, an amateur, Miss Maria Desanges, exhibited skill and refined taste in her performance of the two pleasing little songs which she sang to her own guitar accompaniment. Other musical pieces were playfully presented by Miss Purdy, Madlle. Mariani, Signor Bonetti, and Herr Werrenmath.

Madame SIDNEY PRATT, who took in the head of English gynaecists, during her recent visit to Mr. and Mrs. Allen Macdonald, at their seat, Buckley, near Ballinacorney, has the honor of performing before H. R. B., the Duchess of Albany, who is herself an accomplished musician, and warmly praised Madame Pratt's brilliant color playing.

Madame STONEY PRATTEN, the eminent guitarist, who is staying with Mr. and Mrs. Allan Mackenzie, at Brackley, near Ballater, has had the honour of playing to Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Albany, who expressed great pleasure at Madame STONEY PRATTEN's brilliant performance.

LEARNING THE GUTTAH SIMPLIFIED, by MADRINE SCHNEY PRATTEN, 22 Dorset Street, Portman Square.

This lady has long been regarded as our highest authority on the guitar. She has taught no less than 1,100 pupils, among whom was Her Royal Highness the Princess Louise, and the edition before us (the title of this instruction book) embraces the results of Madame DEBERRY'S matured thought and experience. It is the standard text book on the guitar, and those who wish to master this heavenly instrument must acquire it.

Next comes the question of an instruction book. Mythology R. SUMNER PATTERSON'S "Learning the Guitar Simplified," is by no means the best. It is for the child and youth, and is down to earth. It is written by an instructor, who is not only a good musician, but also a good teacher. This instruction book gives the full description of tuning and strapping the guitar, besides suitable exercises, songs and dances.

And now a word about style. Do not attempt too much. A pretty simple song, accompanied with but a few changes of harmony, nicely played with full harp-like tone, is far preferable to some intricate and unobtainable piece arranged for the instrument; and songs intended for orchestral accompaniments are, as a rule, quite unsuitable for the guitar, with the exception of some laments and serenades.

An entertainment was given at Downshire House, Grosvenor Square (by kind permission of Mrs. Abbott), on Tuesday last, which was in every respect most successful. The guitar solo of Madame RABENY PRATTEN was highly appreciated, in being a unique, talented and pleasing performance.

Of instrumental music the selections were extremely happy, one of the contributors being Madame SIMONE PRATER, whose handling of the guitar was that of an untrained master of it, poor Giulia Regondi, is no more, may be considered unique. In her most effective style she gave, in the first part, "Moonlight," in the second, "Lento Religioso," in the third, "Andante," a series of variations, and in the fourth, a successful little instrument made of wood and skin, called the gacchin. On this she played delightfully, producing a clear and limpid sound which excited at once the sympathy and admiration of the audience.

MADAME SIDNEY PRATTEN

IT is with great pleasure that we have the privilege of placing before you another portrait of Madame Sidney Praetzel, the celebrated guitarist. Madame Sidney Praetzel, nee Catherine Josepha Felzer, was born of Muelheim, on the beautiful Rhine—as so popularly known to Englishmen, on account of the many legends connected with places of such scenic beauty. Her father, a well-known and successful musician, a talented lily should be a native of so romantic a place. The world first knew her as an infant prodigy, as we find little Franklin Pierce at a very tender age charming numerous audiences. Her first husband, a German nobleman, died in 1847, and she recently fell down. It is needless to say that our countrymen gave her an enthusiastic reception. She afterwards appeared with unparalleled success on the Continent, and on returning was the guest of Lord and Lady John Russell. A later year, however, the well-known composer, Franz Schubert, died, and Madame Sidney Praetzel singular subject of our sketch, how difficult it is to avoid Caprice's fate. It was one of mutual love, and they were married on Sept. 24th, 1851. After fourteen years of almost supreme happiness Madame Pratten received the greatest blow in her brilliant career—the loss of her husband. In their case it was truly as the poet says: "Two hearts beat as one," and it is not to be wondered at that for a time his memory was all that she lived for, and she was left to weep. But her high sense of duty showed her that there are other things to do besides mourn the loved one lost, and we find her again writing these beautiful compositions of hers—of which space does not allow us to enumerate—and charming as by her brilliant playing. She was the instrument to introduce Louis, Mendelssohn, and Schumann to the English stage. Dear Madam, the nobility have received instruction from her. It will surprise our readers when we tell them that this lady has instructed 1,668 pupils—what a pattern of industry! Like most German ladies she impresses one by her sincerity of manner, and true-heartedness. She has a host of friends, who are most enthusiastic admirers of her art, and she is a valued talent, but of no special interest to us, and, clearly, unhappy.

A concert program held at Carlton House Terrace on June 26, 1868.

Madame Sidney Pratten used to, in her performances as a soloist, with charming ingenuity, tell the story of her own compositions, which, no doubt, was much appreciated by the audience who attended her concerts, whom she had captivated. She also played frequently with her students at the Guildhall School of Music and at Steinway Hall.

For many years Madame Sidney Pratten spent short weekend stays in Brighton, England [now Brighton & Hove] to rest, staying at Connaught House and Cavendish Mansion.

Madame Sidney Pratten gave her last public concert in 1893. Such was his fame in life and popularity that prominent guitar builders such as Louis Panormo (1784-1862) and Pierre René Lacôte (1785-1871) labelled dozens of their instruments with her name to promote sales.

Madame Sidney Pratten lived the last years of her life at 22 Dorset Street, Portman Square (London).

Several local newspapers echoed the news of her death, as can be seen in the following obituaries:

MADAME SIDNEY PRATTEN, the eminent guitarist, died suddenly on the 10th inst. Madame Pratten had been ailing for some time, but under skilful treatment rallied considerably, and derived benefit from a short stay at Brighton; but in returning to town she was seized with an acute bronchial attack, which produced failure of the heart's action. Madame Pratten was of German parentage, and was a fashionable teacher of the guitar in England. A large number of the aristocracy were instructed by her, Madame Pratten having the honour of initiating H.R.H. the Princess Louise into the art. She was buried in Brompton Cemetery on the 18th inst.

AN EMINENT GUITARISTE.

MME. SIDNEY PRATTEN, née Catherina Josepha Pelzer, was a native of Mulheim on the Rhine. Her father was an excellent guitar player and a clever musician. His one ambition was, however, to place his little daughter before the world as an infant prodigy, and in this endeavour he was so kindly assisted by Nature that, at a very tender age, little Fraulein Pelzer appeared as a "star" of an exceptional brilliancy—a brilliancy, we need hardly state, that has never been eclipsed. She was first presented in public before a London audience at the King's Theatre (now Her Majesty's). A most enthusiastic reception awaited her, and the press was unanimous in its praises of her extraordinary performances. The little artiste created a great furor. When but seven years of age, Miss Pelzer played at a concert in which Mme. Grisi and other eminent singers took part. About the year 1836 she achieved great successes at concerts given in the Hanover Square Rooms, and we quote the following criticism from The Mark Lane Express:—"The interesting little beneficiaire astonished her hearers by her wonderful performances on the guitar. . . . this young lady produced effects from the guitar of which we had no previous conception it was capable." On another occasion, a critique says: "She played three brilliant pieces, accompanied by her father, to the general admiration of the company assembled. Her touch is powerful, and her execution is wonderful; we were surprised how such tiny fingers could draw forth such perfect sounds from an instrument requiring some strength to make it 'discourse eloquent music.' In a very few years we doubt not to see this interesting child at the head of her profession."

Miss Pelzer afterwards appeared, with immense success, on the Continent, the newspapers of the time eulogising her abilities in the most extravagant terms. Among her numerous excerpts were the concertos for the guitar by Giuliani—works demanding a perfect technique and considerable powers of endurance to interpret. The Third Concerto alone consists of twenty-seven pages of closely printed music! The "little heroine"—as one critic so aptly styled her—had to compete with the greatest guitar players the world has ever heard; Giuliani, Sor, Schulz, Neuland, Horetzky, and the youthful Regondi were all before the public. The resources of the instrument were then exhibited as they had never been exhibited before, and, probably, as they never will be again. However, in spite of innumerable draw-

Miss Pelzer afterwards resided at Exeter, in which city she became the fashionable teacher. Lady John Somerset, the illustrious sister-in-law of the brave Lord Fitzroy Somerset, took a fancy to the young artiste and brought her to London, and most generously allowed her to reside at her mansion, and her ladyship introduced Miss Pelzer into the highest circles. Lady Somerset's protégée became the guitar instructress to many of the daughters of nobility, and she soon rose into eminence as a teacher. It was in honour of Lord Fitzroy Somerset being created Lord Raglan that Miss Pelzer composed one of her chef d'œuvres—the celebrated "Lord Raglan March."

So passed the younger days of this eminent artiste. A few years later Miss Pelzer became the object of the admiration of the distinguished musician, Robert Sidney Pratten, the great flautist and well-known composer. They became inseparably devoted to one another, and were married on September 24, 1854, and lived a most happy life—until death intervened. Mr. Pratten passed away in 1868. "My married life," said Madame Pratten, "was a heaven upon earth."

During these bright years of her life Madame Sidney Pratten assiduously devoted herself to the art she so dearly loved. She gave recitals, and produced a great many of the charming compositions for which she was so justly famed. Most of her exquisite "Songs without Words," "Impromptus," "Sketches," &c., derived their inspiration from episodes in her daily life, which, together with her poetic and romantic imagination, depict such fascinating little "tone pictures" that are worthy of the highest commendation. Her natural instinct in the choice of harmony, and her refined conception of melody, render her music genuine works of art—works for which she will be known for ages yet to come. The details attending the composition of some of her choicest morceaux are very touching. "Forgotten," "Evening Song," and many others each tell a pathetic story.

For some time after her husband's death Madame Pratten, overcome by grief, laid aside her pen. "At this time," she said, "I thought that I should never write another note." The "soul of music" seemed to have fled from her, but only for a while. Her undaunted spirit soon arose, and bade her realise that

Visit to Brompton Cemetery -

On March 24, 2023, accompanied by my daughter Laura, I visited Brompton Cemetery (London) [with more than 200,000 graves, many of them from the nineteenth century] which was founded in 1840. I visited the cemetery again on August 7, 2023, and June 9, 2024 (accompanied by my daughters Laura and Inés).

Madame Sidney Pratten's grave is in the southeastern area of the Great Circle (an area of the cemetery reminiscent of the Plaza de Roma). On my first visit I took several photographs and left a copy of my book (first edition) on her grave, well protected in a plastic case, as a tribute, as well as photographing myself next to her. It was a very emotional and unforgettable moment for me.

(I didn't have this blueprint the first time I visited her grave)

When I revisited the tomb on August 7, 2023, the book was still there, intact in its sleeve, just as I left it. But on the visit of June 9, 2024, the book had disappeared. Also, as I promised Madame Sidney Pratten, whenever I go to London I will go to visit her.

More than 125 years have passed, and the tomb is neglected, the chains are broken and no one visits it. The tombstone can barely be read. All this is very sad for me.

Guitars

Between Madame Sidney Pratten and her sister Giulia Pelzer they gathered a total of 45 guitars during their lifetime, 13 of them by the famous luthier Louis Panormo and some others that belonged to Giulio Regondi, Leonhard Schulz, Maria Malibrán (1808-1836) and Fernando Sor (two guitars made by Pierre René Lacôte).

After Madame Sidney Pratten's death in 1895, her sister Giulia Pelzer inherited many of her instruments and archive, which were auctioned at Sotheby's in 1938 (the year of Giulia Pelzer's death). Many of the archives and several instruments (a total of 18 guitars) were again auctioned at Christie's on July 21, 1978. Other guitars in the collection were also auctioned in London, also in 1978, after Christie's auction.

On March 10, 2022, the auction house Musical Instruments at Gardiner Houlgate announced the sale of a collection of seven (7) Madame Sidney Pratten guitars and other related items. The auction, which was held on March 17, included seven guitars, a gigelira, original scores with annotations, a watercolour portrait of Catharina Josepha Pelzer as a young woman, several photographs of the Pelzer family and various items, according to the following list that we transcribe verbatim (with some additions of mine in italics):³³

This guitar was previously auctioned by Sotheby's in 1938 (lot 192) and is attributed to French builder Joseph Gerard, ca. 1831.

It's a Guiot guitar.

- Early nineteenth century, French guitar, without label, sold along with various documents related to Napoleon Bonaparte. The guitar was a gift from Captain Bacheville of the Napoleonic army to Ferdinand Pelzer (who kept it on his bed for many years, in the words of Giulia Pelzer) and was sold along with an old black-and-white photograph of the guitar and an engraving of Ferdinand Pelzer with a similar guitar. It is one of the guitars that were auctioned at Sotheby's in 1938 (lot 211). It was also included in the lot of 18 guitars auctioned by Christie's in 1978.

Throughout her life Madame Sidney Pratten composed more than two hundred works, both for solo guitar and for voice and guitar or for guitar and other instruments (piano and guitar machette, mainly).
